GERMANY DENIES BLAME

Berlin Declares No German Submarine or Warship Caused Disaster Aboard the British Steamship.

Berlin, April 8.—The German government is able to announce that no German submarine or warship was responsible for the explosion which damaged the British steamship Sussex.

WILSON HURRIES BACK.

Terminates Week-End Cruise in Expectation of German Reply.

Washington, April 8.—President Wilson, who left last night on the naval yacht Mayflower for a week-end cruise, will return to Washington at once, arriving about 4:30 p. m. today. Snow and sleet were given officially as the cause of his return.

Secretary Lansing said no new information had been received from the German government concerning the submarine question, but it was expected at any time. The secretary plans to see the president tonight.

Unofficial advices from Berlin stated that Ambassador Gerard had forwarded a preliminary report. It had not arrived early today.

President Wilson had gone aboard the Mayflower on another week-end cruise down the Potomac. The president took with him all the data on the Sussex and other cases prepared by the state department. He planned to remain away until tomorrow night or Monday.

Administration officials have agreed to defer any decisive step until full opportunity has been allowed the German government to present its side of the case.

This afternoon no word had been received from Ambassador Gerard and the news dispatches from Berlin saying Germany disclaimed responsibility for destruction of the Sussex was the only information before officials.

May 16 to 26 is Date for Y. M. C. A. Campaign

The committee in charge of the Young Men's Christian association building campaign, of which A. H. Perfect is chairman, has definitely decided to wage the campaign from May 16 to 26. This conclusion was reached Saturday. Many of the members of the committee met at the Anthony hotel at noon for luncheon with E. E. Stacey, state Y. M. C. A. secretary, and Paul Taylor, president of the Huntington association.

Ernest L. Mogge, building campaign manager of Indiana, will come to Fort Wayne Monday, at which time plans for the campaign will be discussed and formed. Mr. Mogge is considered the most successful campaign manager in the United States, as results showed in the Michigan City and Anderson campaigns, where more than the required sums were raised.

APRIL SNOWFALL IS OVER A VAST REGION

All East of Mississippi
Experiences It.

Washington, April 8.—Snowstorms extending over the Ohio valley and Cape Hatteras were moving eastward and northward today and promised to cover almost the whole region east of the Mississippi and north of the gulf states. Temperatures had dropped below seasonal averages in most of that territory, but no extreme cold was experienced. Snow and rain for tonight was predicted by the weather bureau for the Ohio river valley and the lower lake region and it may continue tomorrow. The storm in the Ohio valley is expected to last into Sunday with a possibility of freezing temperatures in part of that region.

What the Week Promises.

In its forecast for the week beginning Sunday the weather bureau says: "Unseasonably cool weather will prevail the first half of the week over the great central valleys and the districts east thereof with probably frosts, except the Florida peninsula, and freezing temperatures throughout the Mississippi and Ohio valleys, the lake region, the middle Atlantic and New England states."

"The latter part of the week will be much warmer."

"The storm that now covers the Ohio valley and the middle Atlantic states will advance northeastward and be attended by snows Sunday in the Ohio valley and the lower lake region and snow or rain in the north Atlantic states. Until this exception generally fair weather will prevail throughout the country during the coming week."

TWO WILL DIE FROM BURNS.

Cleveland, O., April 8.—Mrs. Josie Castro, 35, and her daughter Annie, 17, are dying as the result of burns sustained today when an explosion set fire to their home. The blast occurred when Mrs. Castro lighted the kitchen stove to start breakfast. Mrs. Castro's clothing ignited and the daughter was burned trying to save her mother. Six families living in the building were obliged to flee the flames in their night clothes. The building was wrecked.

HENS REFUSE TO BE LED,
BUT WOMEN'S PLAN WINS.

Vincennes, Ind., April 8.—Women of the First Baptist church at Hicksville, wishing to advertise a sale of chickens to raise money for repainting the parsonage, planned to lead their hens from the public square to market. Many women appeared in the square, each carrying a hen under her arm, but the chickens refused to be led when the signal was given. However the effort served the purpose, for the hens sold quickly at the market and enough money was paid for painting the parsonage was obtained.

DISCUSSES PRELIMINARY STEPS TOWARD NEW TAX DEAL IN INDIANA.

WANTS HER MARRIAGE TO BROTHER ANNULLED

Divorce Suit at Anderson
Situation.

Anderson, Ind., April 8.—Mrs. Ethel Snell, 22, has filed in the court a petition for annulment of her marriage in 1912, to a man who said his name was Charles Snell. The plaintiff alleges that soon after the marriage she discovered that her husband was her brother and that his real name is Carl Sinn. It is stated in the complaint that Rev. J. Boyd Jones, of Terre Haute, formerly of Anderson, officiated in the marriage when the couple called at his home.

Mrs. Snell explained in the complaint that she is ten years younger than her brother husband and that while she and her brother were young they became orphans and were reared in separate families. It is further alleged that Snell finally learned of his sister's whereabouts, and seeing that she did not recognize him, he perpetrated a criminal hoax by persuading her to marry him. She further asserted that she did not know that she had a brother living until told by the police. Crowell cannot say whether he was robbed or merely lost his money. When he retired to bed at the hotel here he stuffed both his pocketbooks in the sleeve of his undershirt, and is positive he had them both at the time.

NO TRACE OF FARM HAND'S $500 ROLL

The Fort Wayne police department has been unable to gain any trace of the $500 roll of bills that James C. Crowell, a farm hand employed near South Whitley, says he lost in this city Friday. A thorough search was made about the Palace hotel, Main and Harrison streets, where Crowell stopped Thursday night, but nothing was learned there. Crowell tells the police he is positive he had the bill-fold containing the money in the inside pocket of his vest at the time he purchased a ticket at the Pennsylvania station for Columbus City, Friday. He had $5 in another pocketbook from which he took money to buy his ticket. Arriving at Columbus City he missed his $500 and at once returned to Fort Wayne and enlisted the aid of the police. Crowell cannot say whether he was robbed or merely lost his money. When he retired to bed at the hotel here he stuffed both his pocketbooks in the sleeve of his undershirt, and is positive he had them both at the time.

WE GET HINT TO WITHDRAW

Time for American Army to Get Out of Mexico, Says
Carranza Official.

HAS ACCOMPLISHED
PURPOSE, HE HOLDS

Declares Villa's Power is
by His Flight.

El Paso, Tex., April 8.—The American troops have accomplished their object in destroying Villa's military power and should therefore withdraw from Mexico without delay, was the view expressed today by a well-known member of the Carranza government speaking unofficially.

"The punitive force," he said, "has done all that it could expect to do. It has shattered the forces of Villa, who is now a fugitive robbed of all prestige and power he ever had among the people. The puns may be ignorant, but they are no fools. They will never again respect a man who turned tail and ran like a coward before the Yankees, without even making a stand."

"Meantime it must be admitted that the Mexican people have behaved well toward the American troops. They have received them courteously. But allow them to remain in Mexico indefinitely, 20,000 men hunting for a single bandit who may not be caught in months, is another matter. To allow them to continue their progress to the south indefinitely is still more serious."

"Americans would not tolerate the presence of Canadian army forces within their borders, and surely the presence of Americans beginning to irritate the Mexican people. It looks and feels like a surrender of sovereignty."

"With Villa crushed, now is the logical time for the punitive force to withdraw. No causes of conflict have yet arisen, and the affair has so far turned out fortunately for both sides."

Villa Approaches Parral.
Such information as turned up from Mexican sources today said that Francisco Villa had reached the environs of Parral and had sent emissaries into the town to test the spirit of the garrison and also to obtain provisions. No verification of the report was possible, but the fact that the bandit was reliably reported to have been only fifty miles from Parral two days ago gave color to the story.

LAW MAKES TAX DODGER

Declares S. M. Foster in Address to Indianapolis Lunch Club.

PRESENT SYSTEM IS SHARPLY ASSAILED

Fort Wayne Man Discusses Preliminary Steps for New Tax Deal.

Indianapolis, April 8.—"Preliminary steps toward a New Tax Deal in Indiana," was the theme discussed by Samuel M. Foster, of Fort Wayne, before the Saturday Lunch club here, at its meeting at noon today. Mr. Foster's address follows:

"There is one field of my life's activity which our chairman has failed to mention. In his effort to be kind and courteous rather than truthful and accurate, he has refrained from telling you that I am a tax dodger. I refer to this matter frankly in order that I may benefit from that open confession which the Bible says is good for the soul, and with the further purpose of placing myself at the start in rapport with my audience. If you are disposed to judge me out of my own mouth and condemn me on my own testimony, I will pause long enough to permit him among you that is without sin to cast the first stone. A bread roll or a tea cup will answer if there is no stone available. I knew by your appearance and without this silent testimony that I was addressing a body of prosperous, substantial, well-to-do men. I am not proud of being a tax dodger. I don't boast of it. I don't like the name. I'd rather not be one, and I wouldn't be were it not for the fact that the laws of our state compel me to make choice between being a tax dodger and suffering confiscation of from fifty to 100 per cent. of certain proportions of my income. And as our forefathers found justification in their revolution against their king by declaring that resistance to tyrants was obedience to God, so I take refuge in the statement that self preservation is the first law of nature. I know of nothing in which there is more pretense, subterfuge and false assumption of virtue, barring perhaps religion and politics, than in this matter of tax paying and various kinds of tax dodging."

There are various kinds of tax dodging.

WHITE SLAVE TRAILS IN NORTHERN INDIANA

Evidence Points to Bold Operations by Gang in Past Two Years.

South Bend, Ind., April 8.—United States District Attorney L. Ert Slack, of Indianapolis, is on the trail of an organized gang of white slavers, said to be operating in northern Indiana cities. According to information in the possession of the federal officials the white slavers have for the last two years been boldly operating between South Bend and Chicago, at Gary, Hammond and East Chicago.

Charges filed in the United States court at Hammond, presided over by A. L. Surridge, against Frank Morando, aged 26; Frank Marsala, aged 27, and Mabel Fuscho, aged 21, are to the effect that they have been transporting girls from Chicago to Gary for immoral purposes. The men have been placed under bonds of $5,000 and the woman under a bond of $2,000.

APRIL SNOW STORM TO CONTINUE ANOTHER DAY

Instead of the April showers that produces the May flowers, Fort Wayne and northern Indiana Saturday was visited by an April snow that produced nothing except rheumatism, la grippe, bad colds and the blues. And the worst part of it is that the weatherman promises more snow on Sunday.

He explains that the snow is the result of a mass of air, starting in southern Louisiana Friday morning and which moved northward during the past twenty-four hours, centering in North Carolina Saturday, and a snow area extending north to the Great Lakes.

GERMAN SAILOR HERE ON CROSS-LAND HIKE

Wanderwel Has Been Twice Taken Prisoner by the English.

WALTER WANDERWEL.

March 16 and has not had a hat on his head since that date. His outer wearing apparel consists of a shirt, pair of knee pants, stockings and a pair of heavy shoes. His limbs from the top of his stockings to the bottom of his pants are bare, but notwithstanding his scant wearing apparel he has not had a resemblance of a cold.

Wanderwel is making his way across country to the western coast, from which point he will sail with the hope of reaching home. He would have sailed from New York but for the fact that the Atlantic ocean is not a very safe place for a German sailor to be at the present time. Wanderwel says he has been made prisoner on two different occasions by the English, but each time was released.

WALKS OFF WITH A FINE PORTMANTEAU

Two men entered the A. & L. leather store, in the Odd Fellows' building, 827 Calhoun street, at 8 o'clock Saturday morning, and asked to be shown some traveling bags. While the young saleslady was engaged in the rear of the store showing some bags to one of the men the other walked out of the store with a fine valise skin bag valued at $17. When the saleslady saw the thief leave the store she hastened after him, but he had disappeared from Calhoun street by the time she reached the sidewalk. The other man said he had no acquaintance with the thief. Detective Sergeant Joseph Brennan, who was detailed to investigate, could find no trace of the man who stole the bag.

Crown Prince's Troops Make New Dent in Line

London, April 8.—The salient in the French lines west of the Meuse with the village of Bethincourt at its sharp angle is being pounded on both sides by the crown prince's troops, which in their last drive succeeded in making a new dent in the line southwest of Bethincourt.

The success was achieved near Hautcourt village, the important position lost by the French on Wednesday, the Germans gaining a footing in two small fields between Hautcourt and Hill number 287, which has two-thirds of a mile to the south of the village.

On the other side of the salient there has also been sharp fighting but, according to Paris today the advantage here was with the French, who bested their adversaries in a series of combats between Hautcourt and Chateauvillain.

ENDS HIS LIFE WITH SHOTGUN

Despondency Over Illness
Causes Gilbert McNabb

BLOWS OFF ENTIRE TOP OF HIS HEAD

When She Goes to Prepare Breakfast.

Gilbert McNabb, 40 years old, a well known farmer residing two miles north of Leo on the Spencerville road, committed suicide Saturday morning by blowing off the top of his head with a shotgun, fragments of his skull breaking out a window pane. His head was blown to shreds and parts of his brain were found upon the ceiling of the kitchen of his home where the deed was committed.

Two weeks ago McNabb suffered an attack of la grippe and since then he had been despondent and melancholy much of the time. "Worry over his condition is believed to have affected his mind."

McNabb arose early Saturday morning without disturbing his wife and while she lay asleep committed the act. He had closed all the doors and had taken every precaution not to arouse his wife, succeeding so well that she did not even hear the report of the gun. About 5:30 o'clock she arose and going to the kitchen to prepare breakfast made the horrible discovery. McNabb lay on the floor with fragments of his brain and skull scattered over the entire kitchen.

"According to Mrs. McNabb her husband seemed in better spirits Friday than he had for several days and had come to Fort Wayne to pay his taxes. Though she knew he was greatly worried, she did not have the least intimation that he contemplated suicide."

Pushed Trigger With a Stick.
However, McNabb planned his death most carefully, selecting an hour when there was little possibility of his being thwarted. A double-barreled shotgun was used, but only one barrel was discharged. Sitting on a chair he placed the barrels against his head and with a small stick pushed the trigger.

He had not been long when Mrs. McNabb arose and found him. The widow and one child survive.

Coroner J. E. McArdle was called and made a thorough investigation and will render a verdict that McNabb came to his death by his own hand while in a fit of despondency.

MARKLE SELECTED FOR THE 1917 CONFERENCE

Huntington County Town is Next for Evangelical Church Body.

Huntington, Ind., April 8.—Markle, Huntington county, won over South Bend for the 1917 conference of the Evangelical association now in progress here, and next year's meeting will be held at that point.

The recommendation from the general conference to extend the time limit of pastors from five to seven years was voted down by a majority of five. The proposal to make the president of the Ladies' Aid society a member of the quarterly conference was adopted.

Rev. L. S. Fisher, of South Bend, submitted his report on the episcopal fund, saying that $1,919.70 had been raised for the salaries of bishops.

The Young People's Alliance of the Emmanuel church here had a rally last night, at which Rev. George Pullman, of Rochester, president of the Indiana branch; Rev. Clyde Boyer, of Fort Wayne, and Rev. Ralph Loose, of Huntington, were the speakers. A special music number was a violin solo by Rev. C. A. Glass, a blind evangelist of the Methodist conference.

The day has passed when a man who has failed in everything else can enter the ministry declared Dr. G. B. Kimmel, professor of practical theology in the Evangelical seminary at Naperville, Ill., in an address before the Indiana conference of the Evangelical Association here today. He said the seminary had an enrollment of forty-two students, most of whom were graduates from Northwestern college, a joint institution with the seminary. He deplored the fact that so few preachers appeal from their pulpits for young men to enter the ministry.

A large part of yesterday's session of the conference was devoted to discussion of the new finance plan presented by the Rev. George Johnson, of Cleveland, O., who is the secretary treasurer of the General Missionary society of the church. The Indiana conference was apportioned $12,000, to be raised during the fiscal year for the various benevolences of the church. This sum is to be apportioned among the local congregations.

Montana has been opened as a missionary field by the church, Rev. Mr. Johnson reported. He said the war has seriously affected the work of the church in Germany, reducing the number of active members one-half.

SNOWFALL COMES TO

ALL PARTS OF STATE

Indianapolis, April 8.—Snow fell over all parts of Indiana today. The fall here was a little less than an inch. The lowest temperature reached was 20 degrees above zero. More snow is the forecast.

Philadelphia, April 8.—As much as six inches of snow fell in many parts of Pennsylvania and New Jersey today, the weather bureau in this city reporting the storm as a record-breaker for this time of the year. In Philadelphia up to 10 a. m. there was a fall of three inches and two inches of snow covered much of Delaware. The snow is expected to turn to rain.

ROOSEVELT'S FRIEND COMES OUT FOR ROOT

Robert Bacon Aids Boom for Nomination of New York Senator.

New York, April 8.—The movement for the nomination of Elihu Root for the presidency launched last night by a statement bearing the signatures of 74 prominent republicans is supported by Robert Bacon, former member of Col. Roosevelt's cabinet and one of his closest friends.

In a statement published today Mr. Bacon says: "My first choice is Elihu Root; my second choice Theodore Roosevelt." Mr. Bacon last week was host at a luncheon which brought Mr. Root and Roosevelt together since the latter opposed Mr. Roosevelt at the republican convention in 1912.

Wm. Barnes, republican national committee man, many of whose adherents signed the Root amendment, declares there was nothing behind it except a desire to promote the nomination of Mr. Root. He denied emphatically a report that the statement was a maneuver to help the candidacy of Roosevelt. It was learned the Root movement crystallized at a conference held here last Thursday at the Union League club. Mr. Root it is said knew that the statement was to be issued and offered no objection. Nineteen of those who signed the statement are delegates from New York state to the national convention. Among them are two of the former delegates at large, United States Senator James W. Wadsworth, jr., and State Senator Elton R. Brown. After eulogizing the public services of Mr. Root the statement concludes: "While he has declined to become a candidate even for the high public office, yet if nominated for the presidency by the coming national convention at Chicago his sense of public duty must compel his acceptance."

STATE FINANCE BOARD IS OUT WITH A REPLY

Says Judge Myers "Incorrectly Stated Facts" in Keynote Speech.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 8.—In reply to the keynote speech of Judge Quincy A. Myers at the republican state convention Wednesday, the state board of finance has issued a lengthy statement asserting that Judge Myers "incorrectly stated the facts," and reiterating that the state is entirely out of debt for the first time in 83 years.

The statement contends that the state supreme court has held that the Washburn and Erie canal certificates, referred to by Judge Myers as an outstanding claim against the state, did not constitute a valid claim. The statement denied that the state owed Purdue university $340,500, as asserted by Judge Myers, but contended that the money was a permanent trust fund and that only the interest could be paid on it.

"However, if it is considered a debt," concludes the statement, "there is today, in cash, in the state treasury, $1,700,281.33, which is more than sufficient to protect this trust fund." The statement was signed by Gov. Ralston, Dale J. Crittenden, auditor of state, and George A. Bittler, treasurer of state, constituting the state board of finance.

PAROLE OF TRENTMAN NOW EXPECTED SOON

Indianapolis, April 8.—Reports are current in various circles that Anthony B. Trentman, a Fort Wayne business man, who shot and killed the head waiter of the Anthony hotel, in that city, and who was sentenced to serve two to twenty-one years in prison for manslaughter before the expiration of his minimum two years' term. Many very prominent members of the democratic party in Indiana, it is said, have asked clemency for Trentman.

The Governor's last word on the Trentman parole was to the effect that he had not yet considered it fully, but it is understood that the parole is to be issued soon—or so the rumors go that are floating in certain quarters.

MILLION TINY FLAGS OF BELGIUM ON SALE

Daughters of Revolution in Plan to Aid Women and Children.

New York, April 8.—Today one hundred thousand Daughters of the Revolution put on sale throughout the United States one million little Belgian flags in an effort to raise a fund of one million dollars for the benefit of destitute women and children in Belgium and northern France. The day was selected because it is the forty-first birthday anniversary of King Albert, of Belgium.

Queen Elizabeth, of Belgium, has endorsed the movement in a message to Mrs. Wm. Cummings Story, president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution. The governors of 35 states and mayors of about 2,000 cities gave their approval by designating today as Belgium flag day.

The work is under the supervision of the commission for relief in Belgium. This is said to be the first time in history in which so many women have engaged in a single charitable effort.

Many checks, containing contributions, were received at the headquarters yesterday. Alexander J. Hemphill, chairman of the committee, appointed by President Wilson to aid relief work in Belgium, sent a cablegram to King Albert congratulating him upon the anniversary of his birthday.

FARM VALUES CLIMBING BY LEAPS AND BOUNDS

Washington, April 8.—Agricultural values are increasing almost by leaps and bounds. Figures made public today by the department of agriculture show that values for the United States taken as a whole increased 25.7 per cent in the past four years and 11.5 last year. The figures are based upon reports from the department's field agents. The value of farm lands without improvements is estimated at $45.50 per acre, compared with $40.85 a year ago; $56.23 four years ago. The exceptional increase of last year is attributed in part to the reaction in the south following last year's temporary depression and to the stimulus of war prices, particularly of grain.

BOY SCOUTS TO ENGAGE IN A GOLD BADGE HUNT

Novel Event is Planned by
L. O. Wetzel, as Soon as Weather Permits.

Scout Commissioner of Indiana, L. O. Wetzel, who has thus far organized six boy scout troops in Port Wayne, has begun to plan some novel and unique events in which the boys will engage this spring and summer. The first one will be a gold medal hunt and promises to be an exceedingly interesting affair. In reality it is called a "Treasure Hunt." As soon as the weather settles down and gives indication that spring is really here, Mr. Wetzel will leave the city some Friday afternoon and hide the gold medal. He will take down compass directions as he leaves the city and somewhere within a radius of five miles of Port Wayne will conceal the gold medal. Saturday morning after every boy is equipped for a day's outing and ready to start the hunt he will furnish them with compass directions. The scout who is successful in finding the medal will be given the privilege of keeping it. Troop No. 2, of the First Presbyterian church, and troop No. 3, of Trinity Episcopal church, accompanied Mr. Wetzel to Bethany church Friday evening, where preliminary arrangements were made for the organization of troop No. 6. Indications are that this troop will begin with a membership of nearly twenty.

dodgers and there are some who do not realize that they are what they are. My own views on the matter may be illustrated by the story of a man who, having departed this life, left himself a will, and the executor of his estate, who was good St. Peter, the examination had gone along with apparent satisfaction to the new arrival when at last the executor of the key of Heaven turned a leaf and said:

"How about your taxes. I don't find your name upon the tax duplicate. Were you a tax dodger?"

"No indeed," replied the candidate, throwing out his chest. I made it a practice every year to buy lot of gravel road and street improvement bonds and in this way I was able to make out that I had no taxable property."

"A wary look somewhat tinged with pain, spread over the countenance of the Heavenly doorkeeper, as he said:

"Well, you may get into the elevator."

"After a few moments' waiting the candidate asked of an attendant, 'How soon does this elevator go up?'"

"This elevator doesn't go up," was the reply.

"The man who buys gravel road bonds to escape taxation seems to me no less a tax dodger than he who neglects to report his bank balance on the first day of March."

"I don't mean to say that there aren't some men and more women who live up to the letter of the law, but their estates are largely in the hands of trustees or guardians, if not, they soon will be."

"Guilt Is Mitigated."

"One guilt is somewhat mitigated by the fact that it is understood and agreed that they should be tax dodgers. In fact, if the legislatures of our state wanted to be entirely frank and outspoken, they would place their laws pertaining to taxation with a preamble to the effect that in order that the industrious, economical and thrifty of our people may become well versed and expert in the practice of evasion and evasion, and that their regard for the sanctity of an oath may be lessened or destroyed, that their respect for the majesty of the law be overturned and the standard of citizenship placed on the lowest, possible level, it is therefore hereby enacted that all kinds of property, real, personal and fictitious shall be assessed and taxed at the same rate."

Where the Remedy Lies.

"It would seem a superfluous thing to take up the time in an effort to demonstrate to you how thoroughly our system of taxation has broken down, or in illustrating even a few of the inequalities that seem inseparably associated with our present system of assessment and taxation. Every one of you can read in his own observation and experience many cases of the rank and file of the community who are the victims of unfairness and inequality of assessment. Now and then, however, we meet a man who says that the law is all right—all that is needed is a vigorous enforcement of the law. I, myself, am generally an advocate of that theory that the best way to get rid of a bad law is to enforce it, and that this will lead to its repeal. But the difficulty in this case is that it is not a statute that occasions the trouble but the constitution of the state, and to repeal the constitution is not an easy matter. We can't even amend it, let alone repeal it. The essential preliminary step toward tax reform is thorough revision by a constitutional convention."

Differs With Governor.

"If I remember correctly, our much esteemed governor said something of this sort in his message to the last legislature. Quoting the section of our constitution which declares that 'the general assembly shall provide by law for a uniform and equal rate of assessment and taxation,' he intimated that this sounded good to him and declared that the effect that the trouble was that the law was not generally and fearlessly enforced. I am of the opinion that our salvation, at least through the latter half of the century of our existence as a state, has lain in the fact that the law has not been enforced and that by common consent there has been no pretense of enforcing it except in an occasional case of outrageous and flagrant tax evasion, when it takes on the nature of something akin to capital punishment. This phrase, 'uniform and equal' does have a pleasing sound even as the governor says, but applied to our system of taxation it is about as misleading as the statement that salvation is free. Salvation is free to the man that has nothing, and taxation is un-form and equal to the same class of people.

Enforcement of Tax Law.

"I suppose that the man who thinks that the remedy for the present chaotic and wretched condition of matters pertaining to taxation lies in a rigid, fearless and universal enforcement of the law bases his argument on the theory that if the laws were enforced so much property would be placed upon the tax duplicate that the rate of taxation could be very greatly reduced. If we were to turn round short and take to enforcing the letter of the law, where could you begin? What community should be made the goat and what would be laying pening in the menagerie? I am afraid it would turn out much as when, once upon a time, an enthusiast conceived the idea that if all the people in the world should at the same instant let out a mighty shout, the volume of noise would be so great that it could be heard on the moon. The story goes that the thing was all arranged but when the moment came everybody was so intent on hearing the noise that nobody shouted except a deaf man on the Sandwich Islands."

"Now it is fair to assume that in all these years the best has been done that could have been done in this matter of enforcing the law. We have tried first one thing, then another. We have devised scheme after scheme, we have turned this, that and the other way, recalling to mind the old familiar doggerel originally applied to the shifty and elusive politician:

Winding in and winding out,
Leaving the matter still in doubt;
Whether the thing that made the track
Was going west or coming back."

"We have patched here and have patched there until at last we have come to a point that is reached when men try to repair a house in which sills and joints and studding have become so rotten that they will not hold a nail."

Cites An Example.

"Listen to this: Indianapolis, Feb. 21.—The State Board of Commissioners.—In a letter to county assessors throughout the state today announced that 'On account of the law valuations made in the assessment of real estate it has been decided that 25 per cent. shall be deducted from the assessment of true cash value of personal property for the purpose of equalization, but it must be understood that the true cash value is the basis of assessment, otherwise the 25 per cent. should not be deducted.'"

"This is to say that because rates of assessment and taxation are not uniform and equal, never have been and never will be, not even approximately so after 65 years of effort, therefore, 25 per cent. may be taken off from the assessment of certain kinds of property, the real value of which is clearly apparent and cannot be concealed, just where our state board of tax commissioners find warrant in law to justify their good intentions I am not able to say."

Taxes and Income.

"One of the maxims regarding taxation is that taxation ought always to have regard to ability to pay. This brings up consideration of the relation between the taxes that we pay and the income derived from the property on which the taxes are paid. I don't think we often consider the matter from this angle. Property that yields 4 per cent. income can't afford to pay the same rate of taxation upon the principal as that which yields ten per cent. But I tell you what it can do. Property that yields 4 per cent. can afford to pay the same rate of taxation upon the income, that property that yields ten per cent. can pay, and there is no reason why it shouldn't."

Fort Wayne Illustration.

"Let me illustrate: I own a business block in Fort Wayne. I am also a stockholder in the Wayne Knitting Mills and the German American National Bank. I am not trying to sneak in on anything for these institutions, but I thought I would both worthy of the best I could do. But if I take my own institutions for illustration no one can complain. Assume also that I own 250 shares of Pennsylvania Railroad company stock. When the taxes upon these four properties are each converted into terms of tax upon income, the result is as follows:

The Knitting Mills tax amounted last year to 81.2 per cent. on my income received from my investment in that stock. On the income received from my business block the tax amounted to 18.2 per cent., on my income from 125 shares of the bank stock the tax amounted to 43.1 per cent. Now suppose I move—change my place of residence. Suppose I go to Decatur. The tax on the first three investments that I have enumerated will remain the same. But on the railroad stock will change. In Decatur the tax would amount to 72.1 per cent. of my income and that too, after deducting the 25 per cent. from the value of the stock which, the law permits, I am entitled to. In Hammond, the tax would be 86 per cent. If it were not for the gracious dispensation of the state tax commission the tax in Decatur would be 96.3 per cent., and in Hammond 114.1 per cent."

Why the Difference?

"Now why should there be this difference in the tax upon income from these various sources? The dollar I received from the Wayne Knitting Mills weighs as much and will buy as much as that which comes from the bank or railroad stock. Why, then, shouldn't I bear its full proportion of the burdens of government instead of one-third or one-fifth? Assuming that it should, how can we accomplish this? By merely abolishing the tax on personal property and putting it on the income, but we can't do this so long as our present constitutional provision prevails. Many of our people are up in arms against the federal income tax of one, two or three per cent., as the case may be. I'm willing to admit that it is a most righteous tax in general with several most unrighteous provisions in particular. But I believe in time these faults will all be ironed out. But what would we say of an income tax amounting to twenty, thirty, fifty, seventy-five or 100 per cent. of our income? How long would the government survive if such a tax were levied in times of peace? And yet the laws of Indiana when enforced, as once in awhile they are enforced by mistake or malice, authorities just this sort of confiscation and calls it taxation."

One Man and His Wife.

"There came into Indiana, not long ago a man and his wife from one of the eastern states. In their previous home state they had never seen a tax assessor. When he called on them he found them living in two or three rooms. After assessing their household furniture, he asked them, as was his duty, if they had any money in bank. Yes, they had $700 in certificates of deposit at 3 per cent. Down it went on the tax return as the law requires, and when the next year came around they paid $35 taxes on their little hoard of savings—$14 more than they received in interest. Do you tell me that what we need is a fearless and universal enforcement of the present law? I say unto you, that when the state took $35 in taxes from this man and woman, 186.2 per cent. of what their money earned, penalized them for having saved their money, and committed a sin against God and a crime against humanity; it is to the everlasting disgrace of our state that such extortion can be practiced with the sanction of the law. There are two things that ought to be protected—ignorance and honesty. In Indiana we penalize them whenever they are displayed in reference to taxation."

"As many of you know, the proposition to abolish the personal property tax and to replace it with a tax on income merely represents indebtedness is being considered by many states in the union. Word has recently come that the legislature of the last state where such a movement would be expected to have any chances of success is at this moment considering a bill which provides for the abolition of the personal property tax and the substitution of a state income tax in its place. An 'inimitable diet' the bill was introduced in the New York legislature by a republican member and promises to receive generous support at the hands of men of that political faith. I take it that under our present constitutional restrictions, an income tax that would deliver the goods could hardly be enacted in this state. It is fair to say that in most of the states that have tried it an income tax has not been a success. This is partly due to our dislike for new and direct methods, but principally because the administration of the law has been entrusted to local officials. With our present methods for levying and collecting taxes here in Indiana, an angel sent from God could hardly make the most perfect measure of taxation a moderate success, but the state of Wisconsin seems to have solved the problem. The most important thing done was to take the administration of the law out of politics and put it in the hands of a state commission, a permanent body of men, appointed for long terms, receiving adequate salaries and quite independent of political or local influences. The law has now been in force five years and seems to be working well."

Merely a Substitute.

"It is not an additional tax, but as I have suggested, a substitute for the thoroughly discredited personal property tax in so far as the same applies to intangible property. The law expressly exempts all intangible personal property such as money, credits, notes, stocks and bonds, and also household goods, farm machinery and a few minor items."

Regarding the year 1912 the tax commission reported that 'the net yield of the income tax was considerably more than twice the amount raised heretofore on the class of property exempted under the law' and what is even better, there were more tax payers and fewer tax victims than before."

The Wisconsin income tax is not a state tax except in the sense that it applies to the whole state and is collected by state machinery. There are 47 income tax assessors, one for each township, who are elected by the tax commission after a rigid civil service examination with entire disregard to political affiliation. The proceeds of the tax are distributed 90 per cent. to the local districts where it is collected, and only 10 per cent. goes to the state. This 10 per cent. was intended to meet the expense of administering the law but it has yielded double what was needed."

"We, in this country, have never viewed taxation in its proper light. We have wanted not to know when we paid taxes or how much we paid. Ignorance has been bliss and wisdom a blister. We have been quite complacent and untiringly willing to pay large amounts when the tax went in with the purchase price of our goods and services, but this demonstrating the practical wisdom of the statesman who said, that tax on consumption 'yields the most feathers with the least squawk.' We have never taken kindly to new and unusual methods of taxation, and this has perhaps been natural, for new methods of taxation have always meant additional taxation. Hence our people have always had their hands ready for every suggestion looking to tax revision."

Should Be Matter of Honor.

"Tax paying ought to be a matter of honor. It is one of the ways in which a man can show his patriotism in times of peace. But our system ought to be such that he who lives closest to the spirit and letter of the law would be deemed worthy of the highest regard instead of being considered as one who needs a guardian and a trustee for his estate. Some day that condition will come about and when it does come, men who are known to evade the law instead of being applauded will be ostracized. They will be written down as one who cheats at cards, a foe to society and unworthy of the respect of law-abiding and patriotic citizens. But before you can secure respect for a law and compliance with its provisions, it must be so just and equitable that in living up to it men feel themselves self-respecting citizens and not victims of pocket picking or highway robbery under the protection of the law. We need a new deal from the ground up before we can accomplish this, and the first thing in obtaining a new deal is to strike off the shackles with which we are bound hand and foot by the present constitutional provision. We must have a new constitution for Indiana."

other brilliant dash on the part of the American troops who have pushed south to Satevo. Army officers here say that a reputation of Col. Dodd's exploit was hardly likely, in view of the great distance of the advance corps from the nearest supply base, unless it was within fifty or sixty miles of the Americans. If he has reached Parra it is said that the chase must settle down into a steady grind with the issue to be decided as an endurance test between the United States soldiers and the bandits.

The repeated disappointments of the troops of a speedy termination to the pursuit has given new life to the alarmists on the border. The stories of the massing of Carranza troops in proximity to the international line, which had died away for a period, have been revived in all their old vigor and with several additions. While there is no question that there are considerable numbers of Carranza soldiers concentrated at various points within twenty miles of the Sonora and Chihuahua line, there is equally no doubt that their numbers have been greatly exaggerated by the alarmists.

No exact estimate is possible as the troops are constantly shifting from town to town, but Americans who have passed through northern Sonora and Chihuahua in the last two weeks, are convinced that the total is not more than 10,000 and possibly less.

THE ORDER TO FUNSTON.

War Department's Order is Made Public at Washington.

Washington, April 8.—Recurrence of reports that American troops were to be withdrawn from Mexico were met today at the state department with a statement by Secretary Lansing that no such withdrawal was contemplated so far as he knew and at the war department by publication for the first time of the original order to Major General Funston. The order says:

"You will promptly organize an adequate force of military troops under the command of Brig. Gen. John J. Pershing and will direct him to proceed promptly across the border in pursuit of the Mexican band which attacked the town of Columbus, N. M., and the troops thereon the morning of March 9. These troops will be withdrawn to American territory as soon as the de facto government of Mexico is able to relieve them of this work."

In any event the work of these troops will be regarded as finished as soon as Villa's band or bands are known to be broken up.

"In carrying out these instructions you are authorized to employ whatever guides or interpreters are necessary. You are given authority to employ such transportation, including motor transport, as may be required."

"You are instructed to make all practicable use of the airplanes at San Antonio for observation. Telegraph for whatever reinforcements or material you need. Notify this office as to force selected and expedite movement."

Publication of the order disclosing that it made no mention of taking "Villa dead or alive" which was described as its purpose by officials when it was issued, it was said today, however, that such a statement would hardly be included in an official order and it was pointed out that instructions to disperse the Villa bandits cover whatever action its execution entails."

It was noted, however, that the order does say the work of the American troops would be regarded as finished when the Villa bands are known to be broken up and that they would be withdrawn to American territory when the Carranza government was able to relieve them of the chase.

SCHERER CRITICISED BY ACCOUNTING BOARD

Report Says Too Much Insurance is Carried by the Township.

The state accounting board has completed its report of its recent investigation of the office of Henry P. Scherer, trustee of Wayne township. The report was received by the township trustee some days ago.

The report points out that the trustee is now, and had been prior to his election, acting as agent for various insurance companies, and says that the insurance on some of the buildings were excessive as may be required.

WITH BUTCHER KNIFE WIFE ASSAULTS HIM

So Says Wesley France, Who Flew from Home and Has Not Been Back.

There seems to have been plenty doing all the time at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley France on Taylor street, in the way of heartstone excitement up to last Thursday, but on the day matters took a new and more furious sweep, according to a divorce complaint just filed in the superior court by Wesley against his lawfully wedded wife and helpmeet, Catherine, who, if the allegations of her liege are to be believed, can give her namesake, Shakespeare's shrewish Kate, a good start and win out. Mr. France recites in his complaint that last Thursday his wife assaulted him with a butcher knife, amiably remarking that she would "cut his heart out and throw it to him," and that to save his life he fled from the Taylor street home and has not returned. He also says that for more than a year she has treated him in a cruel and inhuman fashion, showing an ugly, quarrelsome disposition and all the time trying to make home life unpleasant; that she called him names "no fool, dummy and impure," to set out in a complaint, and that often in her rage she would strike him, with anything that was handy, including dishes, frying pans and the like. He avers that she would not cook for him and told him that "she was good enough for him." So Wesley has decided he has enough and, employed Attorney Howard Hanthorn to bring suit.

Notes of the Courts.

Prosecutor Frank A. Emrick states that there will be no proceeding brought against Melville Clapp, who is one of the three republican nominees for legislative representatives nominated in the Allen county primaries, March 7, for having failed to file a certified expense account of his campaign. He was put on the slate without being consulted, made no canvass and spent no money.

In the superior court Luciana Crawford has begun suit against Nathan Barton and others to quiet title to real estate. K. C. Larwill appears for the plaintiff.

In the circuit court judgment for $18,777 has been given the plaintiff in the suit of the Edmunds Electric company vs. Martin and Robert W. Cecil.

The suit of the John M. Branham company vs. the Estey-Watrous Advertising company, has been dismissed from the superior court.

The case of Charles Herring vs. Albert H. Macheth for $10,000 damages, has been set for trial before a jury in the superior court June 19.

The superior court has granted a divorce to Frances M. Barker from Joseph Barker and restored her maiden name of Lanham.

THE SENTINEL'S DAILY SCRIPTURE READING

Romans 14:1-13.

Him that is weak in the faith receive ye, but not to doubtful dispute.

For one believeth that he may eat all things: another, who is weak, eateth herbs.

Let not him that eateth despise him that eateth not: and let not him which eateth not judge him that eateth: for God hath received him.

Who art thou that judgest another man's servant? to his own master he standeth or falleth; yes, he shall be holden up: for God is able to make him stand.

One man esteemeth one day above another: another esteemeth every day alike. Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind.

He that regardeth the day, regardeth it unto the Lord; and he that regardeth not the day, to the Lord he doth not regard it. He that eateth, eateth to the Lord, for he giveth God thanks; and he that eateth not, to the Lord he eateth not, and giveth God thanks.

For none of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself.

For whether we live, we live unto the Lord; and whether we die, we die unto the Lord: whether we live therefore, or die, we are the Lord's.

For to this end Christ both died, and rose, and revived, that he might be Lord both of the dead and living.

But why dost thou judge thy brother? or why dost thou set at naught thy brother? for we shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ.

For it is written, As I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God.

So then every one of us shall give account of himself to God.

Let us not therefore judge one another any more: but judge this rather, that no man put a stumblingblock or an occasion to fall in his brother's way.

The Expense of Campaigning.

We have heard in Indiana during the past few months repeated protests against the expense to candidates who were forced to make a state or even a district canvass to secure nomination under the new state-wide primary law. The charge has been freely made that the man of merely ordinary financial means is practically barred; that only the wealthy can afford to make the race because they alone are in position to finance a campaign sufficiently to insure the possibility of success. The situation is brought forcibly to attention once more in the certified expense account recently filed by Mr. Goodrich, the republican nominee for governor who triumphed heavily over both Mr. McCray and Judge Myers.

The affidavit filed by Mr. Goodrich shows that he expended in round figures about $18,500 in making his campaign for the nomination. A little rapid mathematical calculation will be sufficient to convince one that Mr. Goodrich, shrewd business man that he is, is seeking the governorship for the honor it bestows and not in the hope of financial increment. The salary of the job is about $8,000 per year, with a four-year limit if one is elected—that "if" being always a contingency to be taken into account. No governor, under the constitution, can be elected to succeed himself. In other words, something like $32,000 is the best one can hope for from the governorship. Considerably more than half that sum has been expended by Mr. Goodrich in securing the nomination, and all of it, no doubt, expended in perfectly legitimate fashion. Confronting him yet, also, is the race he must make for election with its attendant expense. This will assuredly be a considerable sum, though perhaps not so large as that devoted to the primary campaign.

It may be contended that there was no necessity for this tremendous primary outlay—and the size of Mr. Goodrich's plurality certainly indicates that he could have won without so strenuous a campaign and without so great an expenditure. That phase of it, however, is easily explained by the psychological element that inspires one to leave no stone unturned in order to succeed after one is once into a thing. Mr. Goodrich and his lieutenants were out to win, and they determined to make a thorough job of it. That much they certainly accomplished. It should be said, also, that in Mr. Goodrich's case there is no occasion for either lamentation or sympathy. He is credited with being possessed, fortunately, of sufficient wealth to escape the likelihood of the pinchings of poverty even if he were to indulge in primary campaigns as a perennial recreation. To the man of ordinary financial status, however, the necessity for making a state-wide campaign of this magnitude is a prospect which might well lead him to conclude to turn the job of saving the country over to somebody else.

One of the early results of Colonel Roosevelt's declaration that the republicans can have him as their candidate for the presidency provided they take him at his own terms is now apparent in the frenzied efforts of something like a hundred prominent New York republicans to infuse new life in the Root presidential boom. Senator Root's age is against him, and he has said he doesn't want the presidential nomination, but the possibility of Colonel Roosevelt at the head of the republican ticket once more has set the old guard in a panic. It is running about in circles and barking like a dog.

And a map of Indiana eloquently portraying geographical distribution of the republican state nominees shows the big and important Twelfth congressional district literally gorging itself with one alternate delegate-at-large to the Chicago convention and one contingent presidential elector, one of whom will get a chance to go if the other fellow doesn't care to do so, and the second conditioned upon the double contingency of the republicans carrying Indiana and the principal obligingly stepping aside. It is certainly some feast for Twelfth district republicans!

Whether upon further investigation it shall prove as actual or as extensive as is now indicated or not, the discovery at Chicago of an alleged anarchistic plot to assassinate all the rulers of Europe is a matter with which American authorities should not temporize. The reds constitute a very real menace wherever they are permitted to gain foothold, and Chicago in the past has had its full share of that. It is profoundly to be hoped that the officers, thus forewarned, will not desist until the entire plot is uprooted before it can be hatched into its full action.

Mr. Harris not only concede that he was beaten for that republican nomination for attorney general, but he goes farther than that. He is willing to admit that he knows precisely who gave him that awful wallop in the convention.

GIRL HAS PET SEALS

MISS BESSIE GRAHAM

Five years ago the father of Miss Bessie Graham was killed while on a seal hunting trip in northern waters. The ship that brought his body to San Francisco also brought three baby seals, which Miss Graham adopted as pets.

For the past four years the seals have been going to school. Herbert Winston, seal trainer, has been the schoolmaster. He taught them to be trick seals and one of them has been earning sufficient money on the stage to support Miss Graham quite comfortably.

BLAKE'S PRISON SCHOOL.

(Denver Post.)

It was ten years ago that Chaplain John G. Blake took his position at the penitentiary at Canon City. And with the beginning of his work there began also a new life for the convicts imprisoned there. There was need for education, for enlightenment, that these men who had sinned against their fellow-men might have a chance in their world when they went forth into it again, and Chaplain Blake found a means of bringing that enlightenment.

He started a school for convicts. There were those who did not even know their A B C's. There were others who were slightly farther advanced. There were still others who possessed good educations, and some with technical training. The ones who knew nothing became the pupils. Those who knew more became the teachers under the direction of the chaplain. And the school became a success.

Pupils learning the wonders of the alphabet, and others learning the intricacies of civil engineering, sat side by side. Mexicans, teaching Americans the Spanish language, in turn went to school to other convict teachers who taught them German or Russian or Italian, according to their nationality.

An interlocking system it was, with every one giving and every one receiving, with the result that when the chaplain died March 29 the school which he had founded contained seventeen convict teachers, ranging in their lessons from reading and writing to Latin and Greek.

And that was only the beginning of the sixty-eight-year-old chaplain's work. He believed it his duty to see that every man went forth into the world with a better understanding of what life meant and what a great, big, wonderful thing it really was. And so, from cell to cell he went, day after day, talking to them, advising them and cheering them. And the best of it was that those convicts listened to Chaplain Blake and heeded the advice that he gave, with the result that more than one man went forth from the prison really benefited by his stay there.

This is printed in what might be called an "appendix" and consists of essays, carefully compiled statistics, and a general fund of information that will save many an hour of research for facts such as the general reader or student of the Bible most wants to know. The beauty of the text, however, with its large type and comprehensive marginal annotations, and the red letter printing of Christ's words in the New Testament, render this special edition "out of competition." It is no plus ultra—there is none other like it! See coupon in today's paper for unrivaled terms.

WOMAN'S LOYAL MOOSE CIRCLE ENJOYS A BANQUET.

The members of the Woman's Loyal Moose circle gave a banquet a few nights ago in Dehn's hall. The event was enjoyed by nearly seventy-five ladies. Mrs. Lettie Smith, the worthy matron of the order, is seated to the extreme right of the picture.

Many bright colors as well as dozens of sweet and beautiful children made Minnet hall a scene of loveliness and happiness this afternoon, so that April snows and some March winds that lagged behind to make trouble for Mrs. April, didn't make a bit of difference with the pretty party that Miss Mervyn Pidgeon gave. Neither did the storm make any difference with Miss Mervyn's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Pidgeon, who thus remembered her thirtieth birthday anniversary. Merry games and dancing with a number of cotillion figures with beautiful Japanese parasols for the girls and fancy caps for the boys as favors passed the time quickly. Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served at 5 o'clock and Easter colors appeared for the ice cream was like an egg with its yellow center while the frosted cakes were in pale pink and the candies were yellow. Miss Mervyn was a picture in her pink silk frock with ribbons, slippers and stockings to match while the effect of the other girls in white and various light colors combined in the spring-like appearance of the scene. A number of the mothers were present with Mrs. Pidgeon to see that no one missed any of the fun and Mr. Frier was on hand to direct the games and the dancing while lively music kept the feet going. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Koppinger, of Cincinnati, an uncle and aunt of the hostess, were visitors at this good time which was enjoyed by Louise Metzger, Inez Martzler, Catherine and Angela Gilmartin, Adeline Kraus, Virginia Thione, Margaret Ann Neuman, Isabella Freeman, Marguerite Pfeiffer, Gladys Young, Regine Minsky, Gladys Lindman, Gillian Polhaus, Lenora Moffat, Anita Ackerman, Julia Calhoun, Helen Shair, Julia Bash, Elizabeth Urbahn, Charlotte Auger, Catherine Barnes, Dorothy Wolf, Grace Hamlet, May Hoffeldinger, Elizabeth Boverford, Margaret Hawkins, Ruth Pepper, Eric Mulholland, Ben Tupper, Morgan Thione, Richard Bliz, John Watt, Edward and William White, James Jackson, Fletcher and Bill Hall, Billy Carahan, Howard Quicksell, Albert Serva, Jack and Billy Master, Norman Perrine.

WHEN LITTLE BOYS DRESS UP.
By Betty Brown.

The Norfolk, box pleated and belted coat is "sonny boy's" favorite, and the Norfolk was never more popular than this spring. The trousers are straight, make wide at the knee in the newest Norfolk. Serge, worsted and chevot make up very well in these little coat suits and there are very pretty patterns in striped galatea, colored pique and checked gingham suitable for warm weather.

The late spring hat of the very small boy will be quite fussy. A broad sash that dangles over his shoulder will be the usual trimming, but narrow bands ending in long streamers will also be used.

Ends Dry, Hoarse or Painful Coughs Quickly

A Simple, Home-Made Remedy, Inexpensive but Unequaled

The prompt and positive results given by this pleasant tasting, home-made cough syrup has caused it to be used in more homes than any other remedy. It gives almost instant relief and will usually overcome the average cough in 24 hours.

Get 2½ ounces Pinex (50 cents worth) from any drug store, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. This makes a full pint—a family supply—of the most effective cough remedy at a cost of only 54 cents or less. You couldn't buy as much ready-made cough medicine for $2.50. Easily prepared and never spoils. Full directions with Pinex.

The promptness, certainty and ease with which this Pinex Syrup overcomes a bad cough, chest or throat cold is truly remarkable. It quickly loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough and heals and soothes a painful cough in a hurry. With a persistent loose cough it stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the annoying hacking.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol and is famous the world over for its splendid effect in bronchitis, whooping cough, bronchial asthma and winter coughs.

To avoid disappointment in making this, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co. Ft. Wayne, Ind.

BIGGEST ALL-STEEL DREDGE IN WORLD IS USED AT PANAMA.

Biggest all-steel dredge in the world, scooping up the dirt that blocks Culbra cut.

Colon, Panama, April 7.—Just as easily as Mrs. Housewife scoops up flour and sifts it into her bread pan, the giant scoop, the Cascades of Culbra cut, scoops up 15 wagon loads of Panama earth and rock at one scoop and drops it down where it won't interfere with canal traffic.

The Cascades is the biggest all-steel dredge in the world.

It is 144 feet in length with 55½ feet beam; 13½ depth of hold and a draught of 8½ feet.

There are four steel spouts on the Cascades, two weighing 35 tons each and two weighing 32 tons each. With its huge bucket lifting 15 wagonloads of dirt every time it dips into the "slide," the dredge removes 14,000 cubic yards of earth and rock daily. It has a record of 17,000 cubic yards a day.

The monster-dredge was made in Germany and shipped to the zone in sections.

Col. Goethels says 7,000,000 cubic yards of dirt must be removed before the Culbra cut is entirely free from obstruction caused by the dirt-avalanche that fell when Panama lost its "angle of repose."

That the channel of the canal will be open before all the 7,000,000 cubic yards of obstruction is removed is the opinion of Col. Goethels.

"It is the intention," he says, "to pass ships through as soon as a channel is secured through the remaining 800 feet, and there is reasonable ground for assuming a channel may be maintained through the obstructed area."

The Ladies' Aid society of the U. B. church held a meeting at the home of Mrs. John Foust, Thursday afternoon, when the time was employed in piecing quilts.

Dr. E. D. Murphy, who has been quite seriously ill at his home the past three weeks, is now so far recovered as to be out again around home.

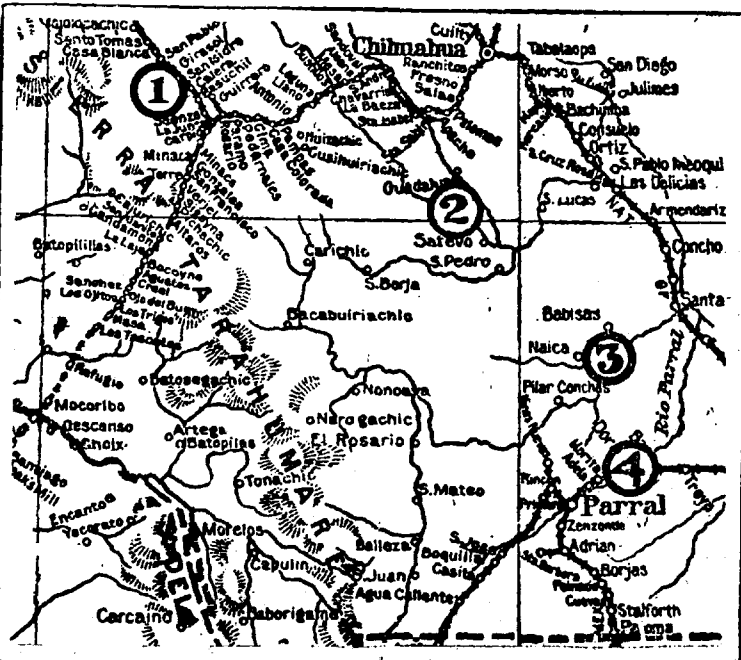

Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Higenbotham, who have been sojourning in the far southwest the past winter, being guests of his brother, Asa Higenbotham, at Phoenix, Arizona, arrived home one day this week and are again domiciled in their residence here, much pleased with their trip.

Quite a considerable land deal was pulled off one day the past week, when Wm. Purdy exchanged his American building at Hicksville to Jessie Furst for 243 acres of rich Paulding county soil, located near Roselms. This swap makes Mr. Purdy the owner of 645 acres. The consideration involves $100,000 of property.

The Home Supply Co.'s annual stockholder's meeting will be held at the Commercial Club rooms, Wednesday evening, April 12, at 8 o'clock.

R. P. SMITLEY, Secretary.

Could Hardly Do Her Work.

Housework is trying on health and strength. Women are as much inclined to kidney and bladder trouble as men. Symptoms of aching back, stiff and sore joints and muscles, blurred vision, puffiness under eyes, should be given prompt attention before they lead to chronic and more serious ailment. Mrs. George Haack, 955 Pearl street, Benton Harbor, Mich., writes: "I was awful bad, with such pain I could hardly do my work, and I am very thankful for Foley Kidney Pills. The dragging weight of an unconfined bust so stretches the supporting muscles that the contour of the figure is spoiled.

CHICAGO GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.
Chicago, April 8.—Anxiety as to developments in the relation of Germany and the United States had a bearish effect today on wheat. The opening, which ranged from 1/4 to 1/2 up, with May at $1.17 1/2 to $1.17 3/4 and July at $1.15 1/2 to $1.15 3/4, was followed by general declines of 1c or more under yesterday's finish. Prices closed unsettled, 1 1/2c to 1 3/4c lower, with May at $1.16@1.16 1/2, and July at $1.14@1.14 1/2.
Corn weakened with wheat. After opening virtually unchanged the market underwent a substantial setback all around. The close was steady at 1/2 to 1/4 cent decline.
Oats seemed to have lost independence of other grains.
Support was lacking in provisions.

TERRY AND TACKS

A KNIGHT IN ARMOR
OH! GOOD NIGHT!

BY JOE FARRELL

EVEN CROSS, SICK CHILDREN LOVE SYRUP OF FIGS

If feverish, bilious, constipated,

Don't scold your fretful, peevish child. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign the little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with sour waste.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, indigestion, diarrhoea, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul waste, the sour bile and fermenting food passes out of the bowels and you have a well and playful child again. Children love this harmless "fruit laxative," and mothers can rest easy after giving it, because it never fails to make their little "insides" clean and sweet.

Keep it handy, Mother! A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Remember there are counterfeits sold here, so surely look and see that yours is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup. —Advertisement.

SEATTLE CITY DADS ARE REAL PATRIOTS

Councilman Allen Dale of Seattle

Seattle, Wash., April 8.—This city has a unique school of patriotism. It is the council chamber where the flag is unfurled and every one stands for a moment at respectful attention before the official business sessions are opened.

The ceremony was introduced under resolution by Councilman Allen Dale who declared his belief that it would help to correct the encroachment of both special privilege and anarchy upon American institutions.

He believes other cities might well follow the example. One member of the council refused to vote for the ordinance, characterizing Dale's resolution as "peanut politics which seeks to capitalize the stars and stripes."

His Age is Against Him.

"I am 52 years old and I have been troubled with kidneys and bladder for a good many years," writes Arthur Jones, Allen, Kan. "My age is against me to ever get cured, but Foley Kidney Pills do me more good than anything I ever tried." Many people suffer from kidney trouble who need not suffer when they can get Foley Kidney Pills. Mr. Jones in a later letter says if it was not for them he would never be able to work in the hay field. Rheumatism, aching back, shooting pains, stiff joints, all have been relieved. The Book of Job

Greek Homer, Italian Dante, English Shakespeare, and German Goethe are the world's greatest poets. Yet not one of them ever produced a work equal to the Book of Job. It is the culmination of all human thought, beyond which the mind of man cannot go. It is epic, it is lyric, it is dramatic. We dwell in a realm of the loftiest inspiration; "we are in the presence of forces above and beyond our present human understanding." We take part in a soul-searching discussion of the deepest problem of philosophy. We exhaust all solutions. We are present at the arbitrament of human existence itself. The judgment is final; there is no appeal.

The lore and wisdom of all the ages is in the Book of Job. It is logic; it is philosophy; it is reason; it is inspiration. Its theme is the Mystery of Human Suffering; without which there would be no human world, no need for laws, for government, for institutions. It presents five solutions of this wrinkled, world-old problem, the last of which answers the question of Man to his Maker.

The voice of God is heard in heaven and on the earth. He answers Job out of the whirlwind. His words are like unto peals of thunder in infinite space that die away amidst the awful majesty of the storm, whilst the lightnings dazzle with lurid splendor. And Job answers and says: "I have heard of Thee by the hearing of the ear; but now mine eye seeth Thee."

You cannot understand literature unless you know the Book of Job! It is the most-quoted work in the language. In Shakespeare's Hamlet, next to the books of the Bible the ofttest quoted piece of literature, there are 260 familiar quotations; in his Macbeth, the next in order, there are 156; but in the Book of Job there are 610 phrases, sentences, paragraphs, that have become so much a part and parcel of our speech, that every writer from Chaucer to Kipling, has appropriated and made them his own.

It will pay you richly to read the Book of Job again and again. Your vocabulary will be multiplied; your taste will be improved; your mind will gain in vigor and insight; and you will imbibe wisdom from its fountain-head.

Big Bird and Birdhouse Exhibit at Public Library Interests Thousands

In this, the merry spring time, when poets begin to wash dishes for a living and wanderlust settles down upon street car motorman, when milliners and milk dealers smile upon the world and young men pay four dollars for a pair of suits to John Drew without wincing this is the time to set a bird house on the back porch roof and await the coming of "our feathered friends."

And to assist the public in understanding birdhouses and their makes and styles and varieties and requirements, the children's department of the Fort Wayne public library, has on display several hundred houses which it has collected from as many different sources.

If in all Allen county there is a bird couple who would not be satisfied with any of the houses in the exhibition, that same Mr. and Mrs. Bird are decidedly hard to please. There are bungalow houses, and houses with front porches. There are log cabins and adobe huts, Swiss chalets, Dutch domes, big houses and little houses, beautiful houses and houses a blind man wouldn't live in.

Some of them suggest the artist's designer, some seem to have hot and cold water, furnace, hardwood downstairs and cement walks (why pay rent?) One seems for all the world like that house around the corner with the big front window and the gold fish and fern. All of which means simply that there are houses of a variety of kinds and conditions on display.

This is the third big bird house exhibit given by the children's department of the library, and it is attracting a great deal of attention all over the city. Whole classes are being brought almost daily from the schools, and the attendants in charge tell of the many designs and their uses.

In the center of the big room is a triumphal arch, or is it a pergola? At least it is a beautiful bit of design and is excellently constructed, all the work of the boys of the Fort Wayne vocational school. Leaning against, suspended from, supported by and rested upon it are several dozen bird houses. Each has a small card telling of its kind and type, and there are so many that one may spend a profitable hour at the arch or pergola—call it center piece, none.

And the What-Nots.

Then in addition to the houses there are a great many other things that have to do with birds, bird life and bird protection. On the walls will be seen pictures of all the common birds of Indiana, and bird charts showing the families of birds, and charts showing the beneficial hawks and owls, valuable American game birds, and birds killed for their feathers. There are pictures of insect-eating birds that should be protected rather than scorned for their taste, all of the charts and many of the pictures sent to the library by the National association of Audubon societies of New York city.

Feeding devices from the shops of Charles E. White, of Kenilworth, Ill., are decidedly interesting. They are so arranged that the dainties which cats and birds alike enjoy are so protected that cats may look but not taste and birds can get to them without any trouble at all. Then there are shelter shelves from the Meridian Bird club of Meridian, N. H., and one of which looks for all the world like a piece of fire apparatus. The Simplex Bird Apparatus

Co. of Denareest, also has some interesting bits of work on display.

Stockbridge Birds There.

Along one wall there is a row of common birds of Indiana and the middle west, from the famous collection of Charles A. Stockbridge. These are excellent specimens, carefully mounted, and form one of the most interesting features of the exhibit. Several cases of birds shown were loaned by Mrs. Littleton Tough.

Although the library already has one of the most comprehensive collections of bird books in the middle west, during this exhibit a large number of books have been brought here from the Comstock Publishing company, of Ithaca, N. Y.

The Houses.

Among the exhibitors of houses are the following: Lansing Rustie Bird House Co., Lansing, Mich.; Maplewood Biological laboratory, Stamford, Conn.; Meriden Bird club, Meriden, N. H.; Farley and Loetscher, Dubuque, Ia.; Whipo-Willo Furniture Co., Scranton, Pa.; Joseph F. Dodson, Chicago; Packard Bird houses, Canton, O. Then in addition, there are a number of houses that were made by local boys in the public school and Fort Wayne high and manual training school. The Sharon-wars workshop of New York city loaned the only bird baths at the exhibit.

COST OF LIVING SOARS TO HIGHEST POINT IN HISTORY AS U. S. CITIZENS BIG AGAINST EUROPE FOR FOODSTUFFS.

This chart is based on official figures furnished by the United States bureau of labor statistics. It shows the fluctuations in retail prices by the month from January, 1912, to January, 1916. Before prices reached the index number of 106 in January, 1916, the highest point was 105 in September, 1914, as the chart indicates.

By Frederick M. Kerby.

Washington, D. C., April 8.—The people of the United States are trying to pull themselves up by their own bootstraps!

That is the only conclusion to be reached from examination of the latest figures on the rising cost of living!

The war abroad has started the greatest wave of prosperity the country has ever had; but, our manufacturers and exporters can get such big prices abroad, the people of this country are bidding against Europe for the foodstuffs of America.

Result: Cost of living is aeroplaning as never before.

The best indication of cost of living, naturally, is retail food prices. Only one agency in the United States compiles such figures—the United States bureau of labor statistics. The gathering of such statistics from all over the country is a big job, and the figures cannot be kept up to the minute.

But the bureau has just finished its compilation for the month of January, 1916. The result shows that the relative retail price of 26 of the principal articles of food used on workingman's tables in the United States was higher in January, 1916, than for any previous January since the compilation of such statistics began.

The "index number" (which is a means of weighing and combining prices into a single unit of measurement) for these 26 articles has risen from 97 in January, 1912, to 106 in January, 1916.

Not only that, but the figure for January, 1916, touches the highest point of any month since 1912. The previous high point was in September, 1914. From that time there was a steady decline in food prices until March, 1915. At that time the effect of the foreign demand and the rising wages and increased manufacturing costs began to be felt. The retail price curves since March, 1915, has been climbing steadily from the index 96, up to 106 in January, 1916.

What has happened to food prices since January is familiar to every housewife. Butter that cost 35 cents in March a year ago is selling for 40 and 45 cents. Lard that was 12 cents a year ago is now 13 to 15 cents. Cream cheese has jumped to 22 and 25 cents, where a year ago, at the low point in food prices, it was 20 cents. Irish potatoes have gone up, in some sections as high as 30 cents a peck.

"Sugar, that absolute necessity in every household, is up to 7 cents, where last year it was 5½¢. The prices—both wholesale and retail—of practically all meats, have risen considerably, since last year and continue to rise.

While wholesale prices are perhaps not so good an indication of the cost of living as retail prices, in some respects their fluctuations serve as a more accurate guide. Retailers are loath to advance prices unless forced to do so by the constantly increasing wholesale price.

The corner grocer knows that he sells less when his groceries are exorbitantly high than when the prices are reasonable. For that reason he does not advance prices unless he is compelled to do so.

JOHN DREW HERE MONDAY IN HIS LATEST COMEDY

Theatrical folk come and go. The facious one may say they principally go and with them the hope that they may not return. But John Drew, finished actor that he is, may always return and be welcome. Here is an actor who occupies a little niche in the public regard that is all his own. His plays are always the embodiment of good taste. He is the one actor who is capable of keeping alive what is known as the "drawing room comedy." His plays are always pleasant, amiable, agreeable and "smart." They never give offense. The aristocrats of real life flock to Mr. Drew's plays to see themselves pictured on the stage and those of another social strata also flock to his plays to see just what the aristocrats of real life look like, knowing that they will be faithfully reproduced. Mr. Drew's admirers will, so it is said, enjoy his new comedy, "The Chief," in which he is to be seen at the Majestic next Monday evening. In New York where this modern play of life and manners has had a most pleasant run, it was said of the work that it was the best its star has had in a long time.

Horace Annesley Vachell is the author of "The Chief" and right at the outset one must commend him for writing a comedy of life in London at the present time that makes not the slightest mention of the war or its horrors. In the comedy Mr. Drew is an Earl and an ex-colonial governor known to his intimates in and out of the government service as the Chief. When the action opens the Earl is a widower and unhappily still has on his hands his departed wife's relations. And an irritating lot they are, or must be, to this cultured, amiable gentleman. There is one joy to him, however, and that is his ward, a precious miss that he looks after like a father. It appears that while at Malta the Earl was very much in love with a charming girl. Circumstances parted them and when they meet again both have lost their helpmates and the youthful widow is in such a financial condition that she seeks a position as secretary. Out of the goodness of his heart the Earl engages her. This brings about an interesting situation. The Earl's mother-in-law has been skillfully planning to effect a marriage between the Earl and her second daughter, who is the ostensible head of his household. It was his mother-in-law who separated the Earl and his first love and she sees the danger of allowing this woman in the Earl's house. She learns that the pearls that the young widow asked Yester to sell for her were false and there is also an incident dug up out of the past in which figures a stolen banknote. Things look decidedly blue for Cynthia, the young widow. A scene that contains much strength comes in the third act where the young woman is accused by the mother-in-law of being a thief. And then comes the unexpected confession from the real thief, so you know all ends just as you would like to have it end.

The role of the Earl calls for all those qualities which Mr. Drew has in such abundance. In the supporting company are Laura Hope Crews, Thais Lawton, Consuelo Bailey, Katherine Stewart, George Graham and Vaughan Trevor.

David Warfield in New Play Coming Thursday.

At the Majestic theater on next Thursday evening David Warfield will present David Belasco's in a legendary play of the sea, entitled "Van Der Decken." In bringing Mr. Warfield here at this time, Mr. Belasco is giving Fort Wayne theatergoers an opportunity of witnessing this great artist in his latest role before his appearance at the Belasco theater, New York. It had been the famous producer's original intention to take Mr. Warfield into New York immediately following the latter's Chicago engagement, but so instantaneous and emphatic has his appeal been in this newest piece that it is reasonably estimated he can remain in New York for an entire year. For this reason Mr. Belasco is discreetly reserving Mr. Warfield's appearance at his own playhouse until the beginning of next season.

In "Van Der Decken," Mr. Belasco has based his story upon the familiar legend of the Flying Dutchman, which tale in one form or another exists in almost every language. It relates of an enchanted ship which can never arrive in port and which from time immemorial has been sailing about at sea. Its captain is a Holland, who once swore that he would "make" the Cape of Good Hope in spite of a fearful storm though he should sail until the Day of Judgment. The evil one took him at his word and as a penalty for his blasphemy he is compelled to sweep the seas unceasingly, without being able to reach a haven. The appearance on the horizon of this spectre-ship is considered by sailors as ominous of disaster.

Mr. Belasco, however, has merely used the incident of the legend for his play, preferring to develop the story along entirely original lines. In "Van Der Decken" there are three acts and the time is 100 years ago. The first act shows "The Three Gulls" on the wharves of a North Sea port in Holland. Set two shows Van Der Decken's cabin on board the Batavia, and act three presents a cottage on the outskirts of Amsterdam, towards the close of a spring day.

As Van Der Decken it is reported that Mr. Warfield is fitted with another role which allows of a display of those superb dramatic gifts which have found their appeal and response in the hearts of all humanity. It is said to be a very picturesque role, totally unlike anything this noted artist has heretofore portrayed, but it is promised that a delightful surprise is in store for his many Fort Wayne admirers. Van Der Decken has already been pronounced as worthy in every way to be classed with those other famous portrayals of Van Der Decken, Simon Levi and Peter Grimm.

In Mr. Warfield's support will be found a notable cast, including as it does such well known names as Maie Bates, Jane Cooper, Ernest Stallard, William Deag, Harold Russell, Frederick Graham, Fritz Lieber, Horace Brahm and others.

AT KEITH PALACE

MYSTERIOUS MRS. FAY

And Others Close Tonight at Palace—New Bill Coming.

Mrs. Eva Fay, the highly talented disciple of the East India Yogi, the mysterious woman whose delvings into the occult have caused Fort Wayne actually to marvel all week, closes her engagement with this evening's performance at the New Palace theater. All week she has been answering questions put to her by the curious and the distressed. Yesterday she held a private matinee for women only and the great theater was thronged with women who unburdened themselves to Mrs. Fay, and whose questions she read without possibly seeing them and answered by means of that mysterious reach into the future of past with which she is high priestess.

On this same bill closing tonight are the Six Castillians, the wonder acrobats of the age; the Misses Leightner and Alexander, the Jolly Trio; Arthur Rigby, the blackface comedy man; The Kewo Brothers, in a laughable club swinging and juggling act, and the premier harmonists, the Harmony Trio.

The Bison City Four Coming. For the first half of the coming week Fort Wayne will welcome back home an old-time favorite, the Bison City Four, the singing quartet with the little tenor, constantly over whose antics Fort Wayne has laughed for several seasons. Santos and Hays, the girl with the funny figure and the original health hunter. Miss Santos is shaped like a dreadnaught and as amusing as the Ford peace ship. The Six Musical Spillers, ragtime devotees of brass and song; Gordon and Marx, the old-time German comedian characters, and the Flying Mayos, a team of trapeze artists who are completing their winter in vaudeville just prior to forsaking the footlights for the circus sawdust, also are on this bill. The real sensation of the bill is that famous serio-comedy sketch, "The Cop," a playlet that confounds the theory that all police are crooked. In "The Cop" a policeman is put to the acid test. He finally is stripped of his star and fired from the force, but clings to his honor and refuses to break before the forces that attempt to debauch him. The denouement is startling. It's a play from the pages of life.

MINSTREL SHOW MONDAY.

DeRue's Big Minstrels at the Temple, Matinee and Night.

Fort Wayne will have its first and only chance to see a minstrel show this season when DeRue's big singing and dancing show comes to the Temple theater Monday matinee and night. The first part is the usual singing show with all of the late song hits of the day, while the last part will introduce a number of vaudeville acts of the entertaining sort.

The Lancaster, O. Press of recent date has the following to say of DeRue Brothers' minstrels:

"DeRue's minstrels at the Sixth street theater Monday evening entertained a good-sized crowd, who thoroughly enjoyed the singing of a creditable quartet, the eccentric dancing of Bert Allen and a monologue by Billy DeRue. The comedy acrobats and Russian dancers were especially well received, and the city for some time, gave two good concerts, in the afternoon and evening. There will be the usual street parade at noon and the free concert before each performance.

COMMITTEE HEARS THE BOOK OF THE PAGEANT

Author Rice Reviews Spectacular Play Before the Local Committee.

Wallace Rice, of Chicago, the man who has written the big spectacular outdoor historical pageant to be put on at Reservoir park as the central feature of the June Centennial celebration, is in consultation with the members of Frank E. Stouder's pageant committee this afternoon at Centennial headquarters in the Commercial club. Mr. Rice is reading the manuscript to the committee, while Donald Robertson, who will select the actors and stage the production, is illustrating the action of the various scenes.

The play will be a magnificent production, as worked out by two masters of the art of pageantry, and the thousands who are looking forward to seeing it will be more than pleased with their hopes of witnessing a great spectacle of the story of Fort Wayne.

Representatives of lighting concerns which will have charge of the illumination of the stage and the pageant grounds are here today and will remain until the first of next week to determine upon the details of the lighting scheme.

Seat Sale on Soon. The sale of reserved seats for the pageant will begin shortly, and the rush to obtain the best locations among the various sections of the amphitheater is expected to be of the most lively character.

A total of 14,000 seats will be sold for each of the three days of the pageant. Sam Wolf, the chairman of the seat sale committee, is confident that every ticket will be sold well in advance of the opening date. He has a well-planned system of distribution and sale of tickets, and is waiting only for the seating arrangement to be determined upon so the ticket printing may go forward without delay.

CHICAGO'S MILK WAR IS PRACTICALLY ENDED

But One Big Distributor Hold Out on New Advance in the Price.

Chicago, April 8.—The milk war between producers in the Chicago district and the distributors in Chicago, which for the last few days has curtailed deliveries to consumers is practically at an end today. But one distributor, the Borden Condensed Milk company, has not signed an agreement with the producers to buy milk at the new price of $1.55 per hundred pounds, an increase of 22 cents a hundred over the old price. Local officers of the company tentatively agreed to settle at the price demanded by the farmers but announced their action would have to be ratified by the directors of the company at New York before contracts are signed.

All of the distributors with the exception of one have announced that there will be no increase in the price of eight cents a quart which consumers now pay. Dealers say it is probable the full daily supply of between 1,500,000 and 1,750,000 quarts will be received today.

Assistant United States District Attorney Michael Igo announced he will start an investigation to determine whether either the Milk Producers' association or the distributors have violated the Sherman anti-trust law, as applied to inter-state commerce, by attempting to fix prices.

SMITH WILL NOT BE NAMED CO-RESPONDENT

San Francisco, April 8.—Art Smith, the Fort Wayne birdboy, will not be named as co-respondent in the answer which William Caples, son of the late millionaire mayor of El Paso, will file to his wife's petition for divorce.

This announcement was made by Porter A. Ashe, attorney for Caples. "We will make a specific denial of all the charges in Mrs. Caples' suit but will not make any counter charges," he said. "We will deny her charges and ask the court to dismiss the suit."

When announcement was made some time ago that Smith would probably be named as co-respondent, Smith immediately declared his innocence and instructed his attorney to sue Caples for criminal libel in the event he carried out his threat.

Washington, April 8.—The appropriations sub-committee of the house naval committee will begin voting Monday on the measure which carries the administration's five year naval building program. Chairman Budget of the committee, hopes to have the bill ready for the house by April 25. The sub-committee encountered delay in awaiting the completion of the printed record of the hearings, which lasted more than two months. It consists of more than 3,500 pages. Strong efforts will be made in the committee to increase the year's program.

A FLASH IN MOTION PICTURES

LETTERS FROM A CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL ACTOR BY A. H. GIEBLER

DEAR DAVE:
Well, Dave, I didn't stay out of work very long, did I? And it's just because you can't keep a good man down. When I got mad at J. J. Murphy, because he played that trick on me and had me bust into that picnic the way he did, I said I'd never go back to work for the Occidental Company again because it's kind of

"If you get that correspondence school stuff out of your head you'll be all right in two or three years."

Little company, and there ain't much of a chance to make big money with them.

But I went around to see Mr. Crossland, the head director, and told him about quitting, and he said:

"Well, whatever Murphy does is all right. He's running that end of it, and if he don't want you I can't do anything."

I told him I didn't want him to do anything. I asked Lucy what J. J. said about me, and she said that he said there was the making of a good comedy actor in me, and if I wasn't such a bonehead, and didn't hate myself so much I wouldn't have lost my job.

I guess a lot of them other companies would have made me an offer when they knew I was at liberty, but then, what is the use of jumping around from one company to another, and if J. J. thought I was such a good actor as all that, I thought I'd go back to work for him, and I told him I was willing to come back, and he said:

"Well, Tom, if you'll get that correspondence school stuff out of your head you'll be all right in two or three years."

I said: "All right, I'll come back, because lots of people will want to see me in the pictures you are making. If they don't see me they won't like it, and then you may lose money, and I don't want anybody to lose money on me."

J. J. told Mrs. Strongheart that he knew I'd ask for a job back, if he hadn't known that he wouldn't have let me go. He thinks he fired me, and if I just let him think it, Dave, it won't hurt him none, and I tell you acting in the movies at $50 a week is better than loafing around, because there are about 500 actors and actresses out there looking for work and can't find it.

I got that $15 back that I paid that man that was going to get me a fortune out of them English courts because some of my people way back yonder had it coming to them. He came back and said he'd have to have some more money because the king of England was awfully hard up account of the war, and was making everybody in London and England pay more taxes, and if all of the Boggesses in this country didn't give him some more money the king of England might sell that land for taxes before the lawsuit was settled.

I told him I wasn't working and couldn't pay him any more, and then Lucy's little sister, the one that got hurt from falling from a trapeze, came into the room, and he said:

"Where did that kid come from?" I said that she was Mr. Maccollini's little girl, and he said he guessed he'd have to go. Just then Lucy came in. She said:

"Hello, Peterson, when did you quit preaching?"

He turned kind a pale and acted like he didn't know what she was talking about, and she said:

"Tom, is this the man you paid $15 to?" I said "Yes," then she said to Peterson: "Cough up with them $15, Peterson, this boy needs his money."

He tried to bluff her, but she said: "Come across with that $15, or I'll tell the police about you taking that money from them people in San Francisco and promising to get them jobs as actors in the movies."

He gave up the money then, and said: "You think you are smart," to Lucy. And I said: "You quit swearing at a lady," and he said: "You make me."

I said: "All right, I can do that, too," and I kinda threw him out. When he got up some papers dropped out of his pocket, and I said: "Do you want some more?" but he ran off down the street and left his papers.

I looked at them, and he had one of Mabel's pictures, too. What do you think of that, Dave? That fellow, the stage coach had one and now this grafter had one.

I showed Lucy the picture and she said: "Oh, this is the one you are in love with, isn't it?"

I said: "This is one of them." And she said: "Oh, my, there's two of them. Which one do you like the best?"

I said: "There ain't no difference except that she's got her hair fixed a little different in this picture, and the other one makes her eyes kinda pop out."

Lucy says: "Tom, I sometimes think J. J. is right about calling you a bonehead," but she was laughing when she said that, and I know she didn't mean it. But I tell you, Dave, that Lucy is no bonehead. She sure is smart. You ought to have heard her tell a woman where she got off at that come to the studio the other day.

This woman is a reformer that is writing a book about how movies are made. J. J. Murphy was polite to her and showed her all around and explained everything about the movies to her, and said "Yes, ma'am" and "No, ma'am" to her all the time, and was just as nice as a basket of chips—till she got to asking him some questions he didn't like.

She wanted to know if a lot of the movie girls wasn't bad girls, and then J. J. got mad. "Where did you get that stuff?" he said.

The woman said: "I've heard this on good authority."

J. J. said: "Well, if you've got that kind of ideas there is no use in talking to you. You'd better go back and listen to your authority, you won't find any of that stuff here. I know the kind of a woman you are; you'll go away and write them things in your book, no matter if I do deny them."

She asked him if she could talk to the girls, and he said: "Go ahead, it will do you good." But none of the girls didn't want to talk to her but Lucy and the little red-headed girl that acted with me in the wild-man picture where I got chased by the lions.

Lucy said: "See here, madam, what do you want to know? I'll answer your questions."

And the woman got out her specks and put them on, and got a book to write in. She was an ugly woman and had a long nose and looked like she didn't ever get enough to eat and had never had no good times in her life. She asked Lucy if she thought there was a bad moral atmosphere to acting in the movies, and Lucy said: "In other words, you are asking me and all of us girls here if we are straight?"

The woman didn't say nothing, only she wrote what Lucy said in her book.

Lucy said: "Madam, I may not be able to talk to you in any high-brow manner, but there are a lot of things I'd like to get off my system. I know the show business all up and down the line, and there is no more badness among show people than any other class of people."

worked outside of the movies where somebody didn't try to make me forget some of the things my mother taught me, and that was once when I worked in a Chinese laundry."

Then the woman said: "But there is so much kissing and things like that in moving pictures that isn't moral; think of the temptation."

Lucy said: "Madam, did anybody ever kiss you when other people were looking?" and the woman said: "Never, no, not a bit."

Lucy said: "Well, then, you can't understand. But if you was to get kissed in a movie play with ten or fifteen people standing around looking on, and electric lights as bright as 40,000 candles burning all at once shining on you, you wouldn't think there was anything bad in it, or any more temptation than shaking hands."

But I don't think anybody would want to kiss

is the best chaperon. Good girls don't need them."

The woman said: "But you girls are all too wise, you shouldn't know the meaning of bad things."

And Lucy said: "But you seem to know a good deal about it," and the woman was kinda stumped at that and said she had read all about it in books.

Lucy said that when her mother was alive she wouldn't let her read books of that kind, and the woman said she'd have to go now. J. J. said: "Come back next week. Mr. Boggs, that tall and handsome young gentleman, is going to work in a film where he has to kiss two or three girls." And she said she would like to see some movies made, and then she went away.

J. J. said: "Now she'll go and write a piece about the awful lives movie actors live."

Well, so long, Dave. You find out about me working in a play where I'll have to kiss a lot of girls. I guess J. J. was just fooling, but if he wants me to do it I will, because you have to do whatever they want you to in the movies, Dave, no matter whether it's jumping into the Pacific Ocean, riding a camel or kissing a girl.

Well, so long, Dave. You find out about me finding all them pictures of Mabel and let me know right away.

Lucy said: "Common sense and a decent mind

"I've lived with a circus more than half of my life," Lucy told her, "and I've worked on the regular stage and in vaudeville. I don't know much about the other side of life, but I do know that side, and I know that badness is just as much looked down on among show people as among any other kind, and a girl can be good if she wants to in the show life as well as anywhere."

The woman said: "Well, your case may be exceptional. But is it not true that lots of girls get to play good parts and get big wages because they let the managers and the directors make love to them?"

Lucy said: "No, that is not so! A girl that hasn't got any more sense than to hold down a job that way wouldn't have enough sense to be a good actor, and it takes brains to act in the movies."

Then the little red-headed girl that worked with me in that wild man picture butted in: "I worked in all kinds of places before I came here in the pictures. I lost two jobs in Omaha, Neb., in a canning factory because I wouldn't make dates with the foreman, and I was fired out of a store in Fresno for sticking a pin in the boss' son when he tried to kiss me, and there is only one other place where I ever

Newest Star in Motion Picture Sky Is Jackie Saunders Who Likes to Play 'Harum Scarum' Parts Best of All.

JACKIE SAUNDERS is one of the newest, and at the same time one of the brightest stars to appear in the moving picture sky. She flashed into prominence a few months ago, and ever since has been sending out sparks in the shape of favorable criticism on her work. Enthusiastic friends of Miss Saunders have called her the Maude Adams of the movies, and while she has not had time to win as large a following in the pictures as Miss Adams has on the regular stage, there is much about the little star, when ability and charm of manner is taken into consideration, to make the similarity fitting.

Miss Saunders has that mysterious element which we call personality for want of a better name, in a large degree, and on top of this she has ability and is not afraid of the most tiresome work, the longest hours, or anything that will tend to advance her in her art.

She was born in Philadelphia, and has done a great deal as a citizen of that city to disprove the assertion that its citizens are slow and sleepy. She is of French and German parentage, and says that she is strictly neutral.

Miss Saunders made her first stage appearance when a child in a company of dancing dolls. After that engagement she was taken off the stage and went to school for a long time. When she came out of the convent she took up stage work again in a stock company in her native town, and when she got her feet pretty firmly fixed on the slippery boards of the regular stage, along came the movies.

Miss Saunders, like many of the ambitious young players of that day, saw the opportunities of the new art, and abandoned the speaking for the silent stage.

She made rapid progress from the very first. When she first went to work at the Balboa studios, her fellow-performers used to say: "Keep your eye on Jackie Saunders, she is going to arrive some day," and to judge from the favorable comments her work is receiving of late, she has about reached her destination.

Miss Saunders, like many of the ambitious most democratic of players. There is nothing 'stage' about her. She meets everybody, from the lowly extra to the high and mighty big-salaries star, with the same manner that is one of her principal charms.

She plays any part in the cast with equal ease, but says she likes "harum scarum," tomboy parts best of all.

the publishers, and have them made into scenario form in the studio, because they know just what they want, what kind of actors they have and all about it—something you cannot know.

Your question, "Is it hard to get into photoplaying?" can be answered in one word. Yes, it is very hard to get a place in any of the studios, unless you have had experience, and even then you might have to wait a long time and play extra parts in many plays before you can make any headway.

All of the studios have long waiting lists of people who have had experience on the regular stage. Of course, there is always room for exceptional ability, the same as in any calling. It is not absolutely necessary that you be able to ride and swim, but the ability to do these things help. To be able to act is the prime requisite. If you can do that and can get a chance to show that you can do it, the other things would not matter, and you might get a place, providing, always, that there was a vacancy. But since there are many regular stage players and many regular movie picture players who would like to get work and cannot, the chances are not very good. Do not pay money to any one claiming to have influence or to be able to get you in.

L.—WANTS to know how deeply into detail she must go in writing a play. Plays require more detail at some points than at others, and only the writer can judge this. Make the story plain. If John passes through a room merely to get to the street, little detail is needed, but if he sees a picture on the wall in passing that makes him think of a girl he loved in the long ago, you must have John stop and look at the picture, and perhaps have a vision of the girl, and a lot of detail would be necessary. Or he may be on his way to lunch, and he takes a picture of a girl out of his pocket and compares it with the one on the wall; there is detail of a different character.

You will have to use your own judgment. You have the story; your mind evolves situations and actions that the characters go through to develop the story; go into detail to as great a length as is necessary to make the story clear and convincing. Where you can handle a scene with little detail, do so; there is nothing that will win you favor in the studios so quickly as to make your work professional in these points.

Prices vary. Two reels should bring $50 from one of the better class of studios, perhaps more if the story is good and new.

Writers must think up their own plots. If they cannot do this, they are not writers. Magazine stories are used for pictures, but the producers prefer to make arrangements with

It is very evident from the number of letters that reach this department, that many writers consider the technique of their plays of more importance than the plots. The plot is the first, last and only thing that ever sells a play. The development and technique help, of course, but they are of no value whatever without the plot.

Many writers are deeply concerned about how many scenes, how many words to use, the length of the synopsis, and not a single question about their plots. The studios might buy a play with a good plot to it whether the play conforms to the rules of technique or not, but the most finished product, from a technical standpoint, would not sell if there was no story connected with it.

S. H.—If you write a play and use the plot from a story you have read in a book or magazine, you must get the author's and the publisher's consent, unless it is a story on which the copyright has expired, or a story that has never been copyrighted. You cannot change it around and use it as long as the plot in the story is the property of the first writer. There is very little chance of selling plays made from magazine stories.

IS SEVENTY YEARS OLD.

Pennsylvania Railroad Was Organized in April, 1846.

A statement issued from the Pennsylvania general offices and bearing the signature of Samuel Rea, president of the company, reads as follows: "The Pennsylvania railroad is seventy years old this month. Its charter was granted April 13, 1846. For what our railroad represents after these seventy years credit belongs." "First, to our stockholders, whose capital made possible the development of this railroad." "Second, to those directors, officers and employees who have gone before and to the 250,000 of us who are now working to make this railroad better every day." "Third, to a helpful and reasonable public." "In these seventy years we have learned much. Above all, we know that the future prosperity of our company depends upon the continued confidence, cooperation and good will of the people it serves."

NEED MACHINISTS BADLY.

W. G. Kaiser, superintendent of the Western Gas works, is greatly handicapped in shop work by the lack of machinists. "We need eight or ten machinists at present," he said, "but I don't know where to get them." Several of the lathes, planers, shapers and other machines in the big shop are idle because there are no competent men available to operate them. The Western Gas works is well supplied with orders and if the men were available would be running to full capacity of the plant.

FLOYD ALLEN GOES EAST.

John T. Allen, of the east department of the Pennsylvania shops, received a letter from his son, Floyd A. Allen, in which the young man states that he is now located in New Brunswick, N. J., where he has an excellent position in the pattern shop of the Simplex Auto company. Floyd worked a number of years in the Pennsylvania pattern shop, where he learned his trade. Last fall he resigned and went to Detroit, where he worked in an automobile shop until last week, when he went to New Brunswick.

WABASH MERIT AND DEMERIT MARKS.

Credit marks for good service on the Wabash were awarded to five engineers, four conductors and three brakemen during the month of March. One agent was dismissed and one operator suspended for five days and thirteen engineers, four firemen, five conductors, seven brakemen, four switchmen, three clerks and seven telegraph operators were each assessed demerit marks during this month.

TWO SHOPMEN RESIGN.

W. H. Meyers, a carpenter, who has been employed as a car builder in the Pennsylvania shops for some months, resigned today and Monday he will take employment at his trade with the Woodward Builders. C. H. Westerman, who worked during the winter months in the Pennsylvania fire shop, also resigned today. Next week he will resume work as a carpenter's apprentice with Contractor Rodenbeck.

CHARLEY SHOUP RETURNS HERE.

Machinist Charles T. Shoup, who took a leave of absence about a year ago and went to Florida to develop some land he purchased in the Palm Beach territory, returned here last week and next Monday he will take employment at his trade in the Pennsylvania erecting shop. He still holds his real estate in Florida and expects to return there some day.

RECEIVED CASH IN FOREHEAD.

V. A. Jensen, of the Pennsylvania blacksmith shop, received an ugly gash in the side of the head, near one of his eyes, yesterday, when he was accidentally struck by a piece of iron. Because of the wound, which is not dangerous, he is off duty for a few days.

DOWNING GOES TO CHICAGO.

W. C. Downing, general superintendent of the Pennsylvania Northwest system, passed through the city in his private car on train No. 7 early this morning. He will return to Pittsburgh on train No. 2 tonight.

AUTOMOBILE TRANSMISSION AND SOME OF THE MEN WHO WILL BUILD 800 OF THEM AT THE

A new product at the Fort Wayne factory of the General Electric company and one which is contributing greatly to the business of the plant in the factory manager J. J. Wood's new model of the Futz-Owen transmission for which work is now being pushed on an order for 800 of the machines. Mr. Wood's model possesses a number of improvements over the original, being a better manufacturing proposition, more reliable, of less weight and can be manufactured at a less cost. One of Mr. Wood's machines was tried out in the testing room yesterday and the accompanying picture illustrates it and some of the men who are interested in the work of building the transmission. Setting on the pedestal on which it was placed to allow free access to all its parts, gives it a bulky appearance, altogether absent in the machine attached to the automobile engines ready for service. This machine replaces the coupling wheel, the gear transmission, lighting generator and starting motor and it is built in two sizes, for a five passenger and for a seven passenger car. The personnel of the group of men at the side and back of the transmission

Powerful Stream of Water 30 Feet Below Surface at Orleans.

Orleans, Ind., April 8.—Drillers engaged in sinking wells for the new water works system, struck a powerful stream of water at a depth of 30 feet. It is believed the men drilled into a branch of the historic river or an underground cavern. The roar of the flowing water can be plainly heard for some distance, and despite the fact it is only a hundred feet from another well which is 113 feet deep and through solid rock, the water appears to be of the same quality and flavor as in the deep well.

Many Hear Lecture ON KNIGHT MOTOR

Instructive Address is Delivered Before Large Audience at Majestic.

Before an audience that filled the Majestic theater, Henry H. Hower, S. A. E., delivered a most interesting and instructive lecture Friday evening on the Knight motor. The lecture was illustrated and owners of automobiles were given much valuable information. The speaker was introduced by Attorney W. H. Shambaugh.

Mr. Hower is regarded as one of the best authorities in the country on the Knight motor and in his address he explained in detail the operation of two distinct types of motor, portraying their respective principles on the screen.

The positive action of the sleeve valves, opened and closed by connecting rods, was clearly shown by means of the moving pictures.

It was explained also how the sleeve valves provide the ideal spherically-shaped combustion chamber, acknowledged by all engineers to be the type of combustion chamber that provides the most powerful motor.

Twenty dealers and salesmen of the Fort Wayne Overland company, from towns throughout northern Indiana and western Ohio, were here to attend the lecture and were treated to a banquet at the Anthony. Distinguished guests were William Northrup and F. E. Lee, of the great Willys-Overland organization.

All horseshoeing shops in county will be closed Tuesday, April 11, 1914.

MERCHANTS OPPOSED TO PROGRAM ADVERTISING

The question of advertising in programs will be taken up Monday evening at the regular monthly meeting of the Fort Wayne Retail Merchants' association at the Commercial club, to which both members and non-members are invited.

In a letter sent out by the entertainment committee to the various members, the following comment is made: "Since our last monthly meeting, a couple of strangers came to town and pulled off an entertainment, issued a program, sold tickets, cleaned up a lot of money, left the city, threw a kiss from the rear platform, no doubt, sized us up as a lot of 'Rip Van Winkles'."

"Therefore, let us 'wake up' and prepare ourselves against these 'silver-tongued' professional merchant workers with a pair of brass knuckles or the big stick."

A careful estimate has been made of the money spent in program ads in Fort Wayne and it amounts to $15,000 to $100,000 a year. Three-fourths of this is an absolute waste and some action will be taken Monday evening to curb this awful loss.

LESTER PUTS IN A RIGHT BUSY NIGHT

Two Robberies Net Him in All Nothing But Outlook of Gloom.

Frank Lester, a youth who arrived in Fort Wayne Thursday, was not in motion long, but he had speed while he was going. He got a job at Liebhaf's West Main street restaurant, worked a day, went back at night and burglarized the cook shop, stealing the pipe and tobacco pouch of the chef and then in his own room, which he shared with John Miller, stole a 30-cent pocket knife from his bunkie. He was arrested and charged with petit larceny. He pleaded guilty to the robbery at Liebhaf's, offering in extenuation that his employer had taken from his wages the price of a night's lodging and he thought he'd burgle a bit just to get even. The prisoner's guilty plea, the positive testimony of Liebhaf and Miller's minutely detailed narrative, delivered with candor and impressiveness, conspired to set up a complicated and puzzling problem of justice that the court was not prepared off-hand to unravel, so it was taken under advisement until next Tuesday.

Some More Unfinished Business.

Under the order of unfinished business the city court next Tuesday will have to decide in the case of Louis J. Geiss, proprietor of the Ohio Coal company, who was charged with delivering short weight of coal to Frank Johnson, 421 East Creighton avenue. It was proved beyond doubt and cavil that the wagon driver for Geiss had got mixed in his orders, delivering a half-ton intended for Johnson to John Evers, 2531 Maumee avenue, and Evers' quarter-ton load to Johnson. The Johnson shortage was reported to City Sealer C. B. Tolan, who weighed the Johnson consignment, found it almost 50 per cent short and filed an affidavit. The testimony was clear that merely a mistake had been made and Mr. Geiss knew nothing of it until he was ordered to report at the city court.

Fined for Selling Diseased Horse.

Herbert Stewart was found guilty of selling to William T. Hall a horse afflicted with heaves and known at the time to the seller to be diseased. He was fined $10 and costs. Herbert Stewart is a son of George Stewart, a horse dealer, who was arrested two or three weeks ago for selling the same animal to an Arcola man for $150. He refused the price and took back his nag after an affidavit was filed and the case was dismissed. Young Stewart sold the horse to Hall for $70. He also had made restitution and received back his animal.

Other City Court Cases.

Ed Ryan, John Clifford and John Murphy, vags, were fined $5 and costs and went to jail. Ryan, known here as Riley, and Clifford, have a record for former appearances on more serious charges.

Tim Moore and Howard Dilworth, drunks, drew $5 and costs each and went to jail for fifteen days. John Penney and Dick Brennan, two other drunks, were continued under bond until next week.

James Delaney and George Wilson, bootleggers, were held under bond until Monday.

The case of Fred Lepper, charged with arson for attempting to set fire to the home of Mrs. Dyson, one night last week, was continued until April 12 and his bond remains at $200.

The preliminary hearing of Robert J. Dawson, charged with grand larceny on accusation that he stole $70 from Joseph Barker, of Monroeville, March 10, was continued until Thursday and his bond was fixed at $500.

When Mary "Blew the Tank"

Indiana has a Tipton. Tipton has a high school. The high school has a pupil named Mary. Mary has big blue eyes. The eyes have long lashes. The lashes curl dreamily—too dreamily for the peace of youthful minds in Tipton's hall of learning.

Furthermore—
Tipton has an opera-house, and, of course, has a stage. The stage has often creaked to the pitter of dancing feet. The dancing feet have often inspired visions in the mind of Mary—visions of a pretty apartment, a maid and a limousine all her very own.

And still further—
Tipton has an auto-shop. The auto-shop has a manager. The manager had the love of Mary. Mary had not the love of the auto manager—the one fellow in town who refused to be swayed, chained and hypnotized by the soulful orbs and curly lashes of this fair Hoosier maid.

Above in primar diction, you have the three reasons why Mary Irene Reagan, just 17 years old, ran away from home, or, as she says, "blew the tank." To be more specific: First, because the high school teachers insisted that she make her eyes behave; second, because she fancied the life of a Dolly Dimples, a Bessie Ballet, or a Fannie Footlights; third, in believing that "absence makes the heart grow fonder," she thought the auto manager would follow her, bring her back, marry her—and together they'd live happily ever after.

SHE LOVED ALL IN VAIN.

The reason was by far the most important. If Bernard Bradley, the young distributor of gas wagons, had even so much as taken Mary for a ride around the block, given her the least bit of encouragement, she would have snapped her slender fingers at the teachers—yes, and awakened from the dream of seeing her name flashed by glaring bulbs along Gotham's Great White Way or Chicago's Rialto. But Bernard Bradley did not take her for a spin, nor toot a horn in flirtatious mood—and yet something told Mary that he loved her. She would run away with another youth to whet his jealousy. If Bradley did a Gabriel act, following his village Evangeline, well and good. If he did not—then for a box of make-up, a can of cold cream and a star's dressing-room.

Bradley did not! So Mary sent the "other youth" back home and waited for a Flo Ziegfeld or a Shubert to do the rest. But the police beat Flo and Lee to discovering the whereabouts of Mary, and—well, let the girl tell you the whole story just as she told it to me sitting in the cozy living-room of her parents' home in Tipton.

"Gee, but I had a swell time in Chicago," said Mary. "And you can bet that I'm going back there some day—'cause I don't love Bernard any more, and I'm tired of bein' a Sig Hopkins in this tank town. That's what they call Tipton up there in Chicago—a tank town."

"I wasn't gettin' along very well at school, the teachers bein' right angry at me for firtin' with the boys. PREPARES TO RUN AWAY."

"There wasn't a lad in the school I'd have given a glass of cider to call my steady beau—no, not one. I just was foolin' all of them. The fellow I really liked was Bernard Bradley. He keeps an auto-shop downtown, across the street from the telephone office. But Bernard didn't show any symptoms of bein' head-over-heels crazy about me, though I thought he was bashful and loved me in his quiet sort of way."

"When the teachers began to make an awful fuss about my winkin' and blinkin' at the boys I made up my mind to run away. I had only a few dollars of my own—and folks can't travel without money. So I sent word to Ray Huntsinger over in Elwood that I was 'ready to blow the tank,' as they say up in Chicago. Ray had always been kind of mushy on me, and of course he thought I meant that we should elope. And that was just what I wanted Ray to think. He's workin' all the time and has money."

"You see, I thought that if Bernard really loved me he'd follow us and take me away from Ray before a minister could hitch us up. And if he didn't—well, I'd shake Ray and get a job on the stage. I'm as pretty as some of the actresses that come to Tipton, and what was the use wastin' eyes on a lot of high school boys —and not be appreciated?

"Next day I told some folks I was goin' to run away with Ray, just so as Bernard would hear about it. Then I packed an old shoe box full of things, and, puttin' on my best dress and hat, went to meet Ray at the traction station. He was giggin' happy over havin' taken me from all the other fellows—and he bought me popcorn and candy and lots of goodies on the way to Indianapolis."

"We got there that same day and then left for Chicago. Our goin' to Indianapolis first was to throw my folks off the track. Word got to Bernard, though, just as I wanted it to, that we were headin' for Chicago. My idea was to give him time to get there before us and steal me away from Ray when we arrived in the depot."

"But no Bernard was there to meet us, and it made me feel like 2 cents. Ray was insistin' on gettin' married right away—but I said it was late and we couldn't get a license. So we went to a hotel near the depot. They gave Ray a pen and told him to sign his name in a big book. He signed 'Ray Havens, Indianapolis.' And then they gave me the pen. I saw Ray hadn't written his right name, so I wrote 'Mary Baker, Kokomo.' The clerk smiled and showed us to separate rooms."

"In the mornin' I met Ray and he was all dolled up to get married. 'Oh, we can get married when there's nothin' else to do,' I said. 'Let's go and get somethin' to eat.' Ray acted kind of blue, but it didn't affect my stairs and got into a car. And we rode clean to the end of the line and back. Why, the tracks were higher from the ground than the bank building in Tipton."

"Next we went to the river and saw the bridges go up to let the boats through. Then I asked Ray to take me to a show. 'Get seats in the front row,' I said. 'I won't,' said Ray, 'cause you want to flirt with the actors.' Gee, but Ray was gettin' wise all at once. That's just what I wanted to do. Every fellow in Chicago looked good to me—even better than Bernard. I was beginnin' to forget all about him. Fact is, he and his automobiles went flyin' out of my mind altogether when Ray took me to a cabaret after the show. This was the life—no more Tipton for mine."

"The next day I told Ray he'd better go back home. 'This is a pretty fast town—too fast for you, Ray,' I said. 'You've got a good job and you'd better stick to it. I couldn't marry you and live down in Indiana after seein' Chicago. Maybe some day I'll get tired of it all and go back—but not now.'

LADY BARBERS! CAN YOU BEAT IT?

"Ray felt awfully bad, but said he was willin' to wait. So he paid my hotel rent for a month and gave me a little spendin' money. Then he left for Tipton."

"The day after Ray went away I began to plan goin' on the stage."

Such a smile, such a smile! No wonder Mary Reagan is waiting for Flo Ziegfeld to come along and kidnap her from Tipton! And, gee, but she had a "swell time" in the big, big city!

couldn't forget that face on a bed. Look, it's the same one that's in this paper."

"He held up a copy of an Indianapolis paper. My picture was on the front page, and over it was printed: 'Runaway Girl of 17 for Whom the Police Are Looking.' I tried to take the paper from him, but he handed it to the detective. 'Well, girlie, the game is up,' said the detective. 'Back to Tipton for yours. You're not of age.' His voice had changed so. I began to cry. 'Can the weep stuff,' he said. And then he turned me over to a lady who wore a star and she took me to the police station. That's the last I saw of the man whom I loved more than all others put together."

(Copyright, 1916.)

Baseball Fans.

"Dear me!" remarked the persaphring old lady who was making her first visit to a baseball game. "I don't see how people can tell such terrible fibs."

"What now, auntie?" asked the city niece, in surprise.

"Why, the paper stated that there were thousands of 'fans' out here every afternoon and I am suffering with the heat and can't find one."

Great Force.

"So your latest play has a cyclone, eh?" said the dramatic critic. "Is it realistic?"

"Well, I should say it is," replied the manager, proudly. "Why, when we gave a performance out in Kansas the cyclone looked so natural half of the audience ran down under the orchestra pit, thinking it was a cyclone cellar."

Lady barbers! Gee, what would Tipton say to that!

"I was goin' out of the hotel, bound for the lady barbers, when a swell lookin' fellow met me. He lifted his hat and smiled. Oh, how he could smile. He followed me outside. 'Beg pardon,' he said, 'but didn't you used to be in the chorus of a Chicago show?' I was flattered. This man thought I was a good lookin' enough to be a chorus girl. 'No, sir,' I said. 'But I hope to be in a show soon. You see, I've only been in Chicago a few days. My home's in Tipton, Ind.' The man laughed right out loud. 'Some tank!' he said. And then he whispered: 'I'm a theatrical manager, and I'm goin' to make you a star. You're the prettiest girl I've ever seen.' I was so happy I could have cried. 'Meet me at the Dearborn street depot at 2 o'clock this afternoon and we'll talk things over,' said the man."

"HAVEN'T I MET YOU BEFORE?"

"I was there before 2 o'clock waitin' for him, when a different fellow—gee, he was swell lookin', too—walked up to me and lifted his hat. 'Haven't I met you before?' he asked. 'No, you haven't,' I said. 'Then it was another pretty girl who looked just like you,' he said. And he sat down beside me. 'Sorry I have to go to Canada,' he said, 'but when I come back I'm going to show you the town. I like you. Believe me, you're some kid.' I asked him who he was and he said his father was the mayor of Cuba. And I, silly goose, had always thought that Cuba had a president!"

"While we were talkin' a handsome gentleman walked over to us. 'Do you know this girl?' he asked my friend. 'Why—er—certainly,' replied the other. 'Don't I? turnin' to me. 'Sure,' I said. 'I met him more than ten minutes ago.' At that the handsome stranger threw back his coat, showin' a big star. 'Beat it!' he said to the man who was with me. Then he sat down."

"Do you live in Chicago?" he asked. 'Yes,' I said. 'Where did you come from?' 'Down in Indiana.' 'Folks know you're here?' 'Sure.' 'How old are you?' 'Eighteen.'

LOST HER HEART TO A COP.

"He kept on questionin' me—tryin' to find out if I was tellin' the truth about my age and about my folks knowin' where I was. But I stuck to what I first told him, 'cause I knew he was a detective and could send me back to Tipton."

"He promised to help me get a job, tellin' me to come back to the depot the next day. I hurried away, my heart flutterin' like a pump handle. I didn't even wait to see the man who was goin' to give me a job on the stage. I had forgotten him as I had forgotten about the son of Cuba's mayor and Bernard. You see, I had just lost my heart to this handsome, brave policeman."

"I went back to see him the next mornin' and blushed all over when he shook my hand. He had a partner with him this time—a fellow with a little mustache. They call it a 'misplaced eyebrow' in Chicago. I didn't like the partner, 'cause he kept askin' me too many questions. When the nice detective—the first one I met, you know—asked me to lunch I told him I'd go if he wouldn't bring the other fellow along. He promised not to. We had lunch together and then went to a matinee. After the show he sent me back to the hotel, makin' me promise not to talk with any strange men."

Mary sighed. "Gee, but I was a happy kid. And then a newsboy had to go and spoil it all."

"When Ray and I was comin' from Indianapolis to Chicago the newsboy on the train kept tryin' to flirt with me. Heaven knows, I like to flirt—but not with a newsboy. I told him he was fresh, and Ray said he'd give him a good thrashing if he didn't behave."

A NEWSBOY

"SPILLED THE BEANS."

"Well, a couple of days after I had met the detective I was talkin' to him in the depot when that same newsboy came walkin' toward us. He seemed to know the detective, 'cause he called him by his first name. 'Hello, kid,' he said to me. 'Don't remember me, do you?' I was mad. 'I should say I don't,' I said. 'Well, I remember you,' he said. 'I

SHOWER FOR BRIDE-TO-BE

BY LUCILLE DAUDET.

A NOVEL idea for a linen shower can be executed in the following way: Invite the bride-to-be to spend an evening at your home with a few old friends. See that she arrives the first, and is comfortably seated and chatting when the other guests begin to arrive. Of course, the latter are in the secret, otherwise there would be no shower.

Each guest must come in carrying an umbrella. The bride may not notice the first one, but she will certainly remark before long that every one who enters carries an umbrella. She will probably ask before the last one arrives if it is raining, in which case the guest questioned should answer: "No, but it looks like a shower."

When all the guests have arrived each one must gain possession of her own umbrella in case it has been laid aside on her entrance. At a given signal, which should be some such remark from the hostess as "Did you say it looked like a shower?" the guests should all open their umbrellas with the answer, "It certainly does."

From the steel ribs of each umbrella should be suspended by a string the parcel holding the piece of linen which the guest intends to give the bride. Any big bundles like a tablecloth will make the umbrella a bit bulky when closed, but in such a case the guest will have to smuggle her umbrella in unopened. But most linen pieces can be done up in such small parcels that they can easily be concealed in a closed umbrella.

At the signal to open, the parcels will all hang down by their strings. The guests then hold their umbrellas over the bride-to-be's head. The hostess provides her with scissors to cut down her various bundles and the point of the shower is made apparent.

For such a shower it might be wise if the biggest pieces were kept for presentation at the refreshment table. One of those great big seashore umbrellas should be suspended over the table and the hostess' own gift should be suspended from that.

WHEN YOU GO A TRAVELING

NEW COAT FOR BABY

THE children do not lack pretty frocks and comfortable fashions in these modern days; indeed, their wardrobes are stocked with many very practical possessions that claim a notice.

A little perambulator coat idea is worth a word or two. It has a few snap fasteners in front that enable a muff to be contrived at a moment's notice. Made of the front breadth of the coat by turning the hem under, this cozy place for little cold hands is well appreciated, and as the perambulator cover hides the muff the simple contrivance is not noticeable. To make the muff possible one front side seam of the coat is left loose for a few inches above the hem; the other is naturally free.

A little set of baby comforts given to a lucky child includes a pair of woolen gloves and a perambulator cover to match. The gloves are white with pink gauntlets, and the cover white with a pink lining and turned-back hem.

The turned-back hem has a receptacle in which the gloves may be stowed away ready for Miss Baby to find when she takes her drive.

MILADY'S BEAUTY

CRACKS at the corners of the mouth, a most painful condition, are frequently caused by acid in the stomach. These cases may be treated by applying bicarbonate of soda full strength and dry, there being enough moisture on the surface to make it hold. This is done at night.

DULLNESS of the eye is due to a relaxed state of the eye coats. It always points to a weak condition of the nervous system, which in turn may have been caused by sleeplessness, worry, etc. Necessity, whatever benefits the health will help to remedy this state of the eye. As a broad rule, a good tonic will make the nervous system brighter, and as a result will also brighten the eyes.

A FEW suggestions regarding the habitual sleeping position is sometimes of benefit to those who have thin undeveloped necks and hollow chests, or worse still, incline toward weak lungs and pulmonary troubles. Many people cannot sleep comfortably without one or two pillows beneath the head, thus causing a forward inclination of the shoulders and a consequent contracting of the lung capacity, causing difficult respiration. There is also a considerable amount of unused space in the lower part of the lungs. It is also a frequent cause of round shoulders and an occasional curvature of the spine, and is both unsightly and unhealthy in its effects. A small pillow is all that should be used at any time and none at all is better. No amount of cure or massage can correct such a condition, brought about in so unnecessary a manner.

MUTTON tallow is still considered by many persons as the best remedy for chapped lips and hands, despite the vogue of many more pretentious ointments and other preparations. To render the best service mutton tallow must be properly prepared. Get the unrendered tallow, wash it carefully and place it in a pan with some water. Let it cook slowly in the oven, adding a pinch of alum to keep the melted fat from becoming rancid. When the tallow is ready to be poured into a jar strain it through a double thickness of cheese cloth. Any desired perfume may be added and sometimes a stick of cinnamon is put in the grease. It is in the oven. For those who do not care for the plain tallow white wax in equal proportions is noted with it.

A PRETTY girl, noted for the glistening whiteness of her teeth, has an odd dentifrice which she uses in spring and summer when prices are not prohibitive. She crushes fresh strawberries on her toothbrush and uses them as a dentifrice. The slight acidity in the berry has a whitening tendency and as she rinses her mouth well afterward it seems to have no injurious effect on the enamel.

TO give grace to the waist and lower part of the trunk: Lie at full length on the back. Flex the legs, and, resting solely on the heels and shoulders, raise the body from the mattress without the aid of the hands. Extend the legs, keep the trunk motionless while raising the feet, until the soles are parallel with the ceiling. Extend the legs, keep them motionless, and raise to the sitting position without help from the hands. Stand upright, the feet close together, keep the legs motionless, bend the back, and touch the toes with the fingers of both hands. Stand as before, bend the back and try to touch the side of each foot alternately with the corresponding hand shut. The shutting shortens the reach. Stand upright, keep the legs firm, and twist the upper part of the body to the right and left alternately, trying to look as directly backward as possible.

TO preserve a youthful appearance let the diet be nourishing and digestible, with plenty of hot milk and milk cocoa. A greasy skin requires strict attention to diet, from which cream, much butter, all pastry and rich foods must be excluded. Those subject to flushing of the face should not drink hot liquids, only warm ones. Pale people should eat underdone meat, lightly cooked eggs, oysters and plain milk puddings, and drink hot milk freely.

THERE is a beauty specialist who assures her patients that there is nothing to compare with the pillow nap, as she calls it, for producing beauty. The sleeping out-of-doors fad in "down-to-zero" days and other "dares" to colds, which call forth remonstrances from old-fashioned persons, will be thrown into the shade, the specialist says, by this little beauty sleep. She places three little rose-leaf pillows, which she calls ear pillows, under a patient's head. Heaped on the couch "in such a way as to rest the nerves" are other pillows filled with various compounds. There are three large square pillows filled with pine needles loosely packed and several of clover-top and lavender.

REDNESS of nose after eating usually, but not always, points to indigestion. When it does one may know the fact by one or more of the signs following: Gaseous risings in the throat; burning in the throat; weight across the region of the stomach; pain in the stomach; pain in the lungs. But indigestion may be absent and yet something taken into the stomach may cause the redness. Alcohol will do this. Vinegar, pickles, mustard, spices, etc., are often offenders in this way. Hot foods and drinks may give rise to it. In some cases cold foods and drinks work the mischief. The fact seems to be that in these cases the nerves of a sensitive stomach are easily irritated by any extremes of temperature, or by any other strong stimulant, and that this affects the blood circulation in remote parts.

TO keep the hair bright and glossy and encourage a strong and rapid growth, few better methods exist than that of ventilation. The treatment should be practiced for five minutes each day, night and morning. The tresses should be separated one by one and shaken gently and slowly, so that the air may penetrate between the strands. If a maid's help is obtainable, a still better result can be secured, the attendant fanning the air gently onto the hair with the right hand, while supporting one lock at a time with the other. This must be persisted in until the hair feels light and the scalp cool and refreshed. Besides proving excellent for the hair, the treatment is wonderfully stimulating after severe brain work and has been much recommended in nervous complaints, of which headache and insomnia form a part.

CAREERS FOR CHILDREN

BY EDNA EGAN.

ONE of the most pitiful things in the world is to see a man or woman wasting his or her life's energy on a work for which he or she is totally unsuited. It is even worse if the person in question has a decided talent in another direction. There are thousands of such beings, who are at the present moment devoting their best efforts to a work totally uncongenial to them, in which they will never be more than mediocrities, whereas had they been allowed to follow their natural bent they might have acquired real distinction, to say nothing of real happiness.

Who is to blame in such cases? Whose is the fault for misplacing a worker in an entirely unsuitable field? Sometimes circumstances are responsible. When poverty forces, a man is usually only too glad to obtain any kind of employment, whether it appeals to his own personal tastes or not. We can only sympathize when circumstances are responsible. But quite often it is not the fault of circumstances, but rather of the parents. In how many instances parents bring up their boys and girls with their future all laid out for them?

Mothers, do not try to coerce or influence your children into any following of your own choice, for you will only make them unhappy and will prevent them from ever attaining real success. Success is hard enough to reach under any circumstances, and in order to attain the entire future life of another being, even if there does exist a parental relation between them?

Boys—and girls, too—are placed in positions where every natural inclination is offended. The girl whose tendency is very practical is trained as a musician, while the boy who would have attained fame as an artist is doomed to be a very poor lawyer—because the parents so ordained.

It is far better, mothers, to let nature take its course. You will find just what their tastes are, and you can let them decide their future accordingly. Of course, some youngsters do not display any particular aptitude for any one thing. In such a case you can begin talking a career over with them when they are in school. But don't be

DOINGS IN FASHIONDOM

Big Sleeves and Many Other Innovations are Planned for the Season.

BY MRS. KINGSLEY.

NOT a few of the very smartest shops on this side of the water have given the big sleeves a conspicuous place in their newest models. Those who have been privileged to see these new frocks with their bouffant adornment have first gasped, with dismay, then promptly succumbed to the dictates of fashion and purchased a gown of this kind.

Whether or not the average woman will wear the big sleeve remains to be seen. But the truth is that the average woman did deck herself in this balloon fashion twenty years ago, and what she did once she is apt to do again.

Gray is one of the leading colors of the spring and summer. There is no use cavilling at gray because it is not thought becoming; there are many shades of it and careful choosing will avoid later regret.

Taffeta and several other weaves of silk seem to have taken hold of this gray dye in a satisfying manner, and some of the new frocks of silver gray taffeta, with quaint little Brittany aprons done in mauve silk and caught with rosebuds, are delightful.

In evening gowns there are quite sumptuous gray brocades with dashes of silver or gun metal to give them character; these are trimmed with exceptionally fine silver lace, and that new kind of gun metal lace which was brought about through the adoption of gray as a fashionable color.

For street frocks there are gray gabardines and serges, also jersey cloth, plain, or with borders of colored stripes. There are a vast number of gray separate blouses also in the shops, and of gray tulle and satin combinations there is no end. If one thinks it is not becoming it is quite easy to touch it up with splashes of color that will redress it.

Stone brocade and black and a soft elephant gray and black have a distinguished charm of their own for frocks, and in both cases the black may be distributed in the form of a narrow braid skirt binding, the hip pockets slung from a loose belt, and a binding of the bodice which turns sleeves apart. Little tassels look well instead of buttons on the bodice.

It is only natural that fashion for gray brings in a vast variety of the metallic composition known as gun metal. Large Puritan buckles of it are used on belt, huge bullet-shaped buttons of it are used to fasten coats and basques.

In addition to the fashion of gray there has come about the introduction of Puritan collars on both basques and skirts. Of course, some youngsters do not display any particular aptitude for any one thing. In such a case you can begin talking a career over with them when they are in school. But don't be cats. The fashion for the cape is already so pronounced that one is beginning to see all manner of adaptations of it in lesser forms. Collars have advanced from three inches to ten and touch the shoulder line or hang below it. Sometimes they are made of the material of the gown and sometimes they are of organdie.

The newest frocks, though simple, have quaint touches about them that give them subtlety. One seen recently, made in primrose yellow taffeta had a delicious effect that immediately lifted it out of the commonplace. Round the hem of the skirt and short basque round the bodice the taffeta was looped up to look like the ruffled window blinds that the most expensive and exclusive dressmakers have for their windows. Inside each puckered loop was a water lily of palest pink. Otherwise the frock was very plain, just swathed round the waist with a wide belt of silver tissue.

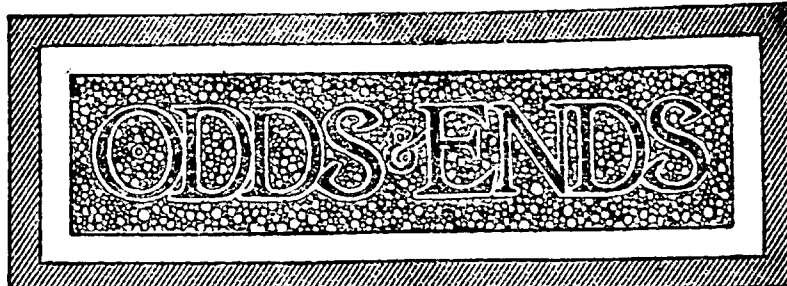

Some of the latest models have been copied from Greek pictures. Their colorings are of the most delicate pastel shades, and they are lightly trimmed with lace draperies and frills. A novel feature of the evening dresses is that they are now lined with either chiffon or the thinnest of silk. The accordion pleated flounce just inside the skirt at the hem is the harbinger of the linings that will in all probability be with us by the autumn. They certainly make the dress hang well and give that adorable frou-frou that is dear to the feminine heart.

Talking of linings, detachable linings of silk satin, or thin alpacas are noticed in many of the new wrap coats and dust cloaks. These are kept in place by snap fasteners and are easily taken out or put in. This is an excellent idea, and one capable of a good deal of exploitation in these days of adapting garments to more than one use.

It is quite pleasant to find in the midst of eccentricities the well known lines of the sports hat, simple in its composition and owing all its charm to its skillful modelling and the material of which it is made.

In pale soft tan and a very becoming turquoise blue, sports hats and coats to match are being sold. These colors seem to be the favorites of the moment, and the modish material is camel's hair. The hats have the knitted aspect of the coats and their fluffy surface, and the hosiery that is sold to match them, completes the trio of prettiness and leaves the choice of a dress a subsidiary affair.

To tone with a blue set gray homespun would be delightful, and to go with a tan one a scouring cloth skirt in the natural creamy shade would be an obvious and satisfactory choice, though tobacco brown would be just as good, with shoe leather of the same tint.

FOLDING the arms is worse than ungraceful. It is unhealthy. By doing so you pull your shoulders forward, flatten your chest and impair deep breathing. The chest becomes so flattened down that it requires constant effort to keep it in the proper position.

AT one of the recent exhibitions of needlework in one of the embroidery schools, mere gowns and waists were shown than of center pieces and the usual fancy work. One of the old features introduced by the teacher were bunches of grapes done in what looked like Irish crochet, but which were actually executed with the regular embroidery needle in consecutive button-hole stitches over a padding. These designs were used, not only on gowns and waists, but on table linen.

IF you are in the pine woods this summer try a pine bath. It was invented by the famous German priest Father Knapp, who devised many wonderful water cures. To prepare this bath gather a pound of fresh pine needles and pine cones. They must be full of resin to be most efficacious. Break them into bits and boil them for thirty minutes in enough water to keep them well covered. Strain the water from them and add it to a hot bath.

FOR home treatment of corns remove all the hard skin that you can, then soften it in warm water and rub with cold cream, vasoline or any softening salve you prefer. Let this be done at night. The next night begin by softening the corn in warm water, rubbing with a pumice stone, finishing with cold cream. If you will persevere with warm water, pumice and salves every night you will be at peace. Even dry rubbing with pumice is good, with the salve both night and morning. When the feet are weary and tender through long standing or waking during the day there is nothing which will give more relief than a warm footbath in which has been dissolved a handful or two of seasalt. Bathe the feet and legs with this for about ten minutes, then rub them well with a good rough towel. The effect is delightfully refreshing, and if you do this just before going to bed insomnia for that night, at any rate, is not likely to trouble you.

YOU know how uneven the edge of a dolly appears after it has been laundered and cut from the linen on which it is worked. One woman whose dolly has a beautiful, smooth edge always embroiders the pattern and then outlines the buttonhole stitching upon the machine. She uses 100 thread and makes several rows of stitches. The pattern is then cut from the material, lightly whipped with fine thread and the usual button-hole stitch is made. The machine stitches serve as a padding and eliminate uneven notches.

A COMBINATION sachet and corset holder is made of white linen, on which the monogram can be embroidered. The bag is made large, with the lower half fashioned into a little pocket in which crepe paper envelopes of sachet can be kept. One always needs a corset holder and the best material for one is white linen. Of course, the finishing touches can be supplied in any dainty pattern.

REGUENTLY girls of 16 or 17 find difficulty in sleeping. This is so wholly unnatural that the cause should at once be discovered and cured. If the doctor tells you there is no functional disorder try the effect of fresh air, exercise, regular habits and simple diet. If possible, take a brisk walk just before going to bed. This must not be so long as to tire. Follow it by a warm bath in which a little seasalt has been dissolved. A gentle massage after the bath is excellent. Sip a glass of hot milk just before getting into bed. Sleep in a dark room with the windows open. Draft can be prevented by means of screens.

LEMONS are very useful in health and sickness. Hot lemonade is one of the best remedies for the incipient cold. It is also excellent in cases of biliousness. For malaria the "Roman cure" is prepared by cutting the rind and pulp of a lemon into a pint of water, then boiling until there is only half a pint. One teaspoonful is taken before each meal. This has cured obstinate cases when quinine failed. Lemon sirup, made by baking a lemon twenty minutes and then squeezing the juice upon half a cupful of sugar, is excellent for hoarseness and to break up a cold. Tie a piece of lemon on a corn at night for five nights, leaving it on all night. Soak the foot in warm water and the corn can be easily removed. When the root of the corn is taken out cover the toe with collodion or some other preparation to protect the skin, which will be sensitive. Unless the tender skin is protected it will soon form another corn. A piece of cotton saturated with vasoline and put over the toe will doubtless protect it just as well.

"SPRING POME" EDDY-TORIUL

In a recent issue of the Bugle we menthioned casualu & incidentally, as you mite say, that Miss Sally Hoskins, one of our most estimable yung ladies & also praps the most talented & only poet writer in Bingville or this end of the county for that matter, was working on a pome entiteld "Spring" & in that same connecthion we made so bold as to express the hope that when Sally completed the pome she would give it to us for publication in the Bugle & thus add to her already wide fame as a genyuse.

Well, it is with turrible pride that we a nounce that Miss Sallys pome on "Spring" is at last completed & that she has authorized us to print it whitch we do as per below so that all the world may read it in the Bugle.

Sally says she would of finishd it sooner except that sometimes she was to bizzzy with housework & other times when she did have time she diddnt have no inspirashion. Sally says that she cant write poetry unless her Muze is working, whatever a Muze is. We askt Wes Woodruff our expert hunter & trapper who is well versd on animulogy if he knowd what a Muze was and Wes said yes, he ketchd one in a trap onct & it was a good eal like a Moose only mutch smaller.

It must be a gift to be able to write pomes like Miss Sally does & if you dont read the one below on "Spring" you'll miss somethink good. It aint not only bootifull in spots, but also sad & pathetick here & there going from grave to gay & full of luv, sentiment & cetry too numerous to menthion. Probly the more ignorerunter amongst our subscribers will haft to read Sallys pome two or three times afore they'll be able to git the full signifcants of same. Be that as it may here is the pome:

O BEWTFEWE! SPRING
BY SALLY HOSKINS, POETIST
O bewtfew! Spring, I am glad you have came!
I hate winter so I cant think up enny name
Whitch is mean enuff to call it & I me glad it is gey
In fact I wouldn't care if we didn't never have winter enny more.

I like to hear the bizzzy bees a buzzin round the flours—
I like to walk thru Lovers Lane in the Springtime twilite hours.
There is somethink in my heart whitch tells me I'm in love—
The mune is shining bright & the stars is twinkling above.

The birds is singing sweetly jest like as if they'd bust their throats
The farmer kalkulates its time to plant his corn & oats;
The lambskins frolick on the green as pert as ennything
& why, is all this thusly—simply becuz its Spring.

To me Spring is the most bewtfewest time of the yr.—
Ennybuddy who don't like spring must be queer.

Winter is too cold, Summers too hot,
Autums too sad,
But spring is jest right & being its here I me glad.

New Invenshion by Lem Quigly

GERMAN ANY DENIES BERLIN

WILSON HURRIES BACK.
Terminates Week-End Cruise in Expectation of German Reply.

Washington, April 8.—President Wilson, who left last night on the naval yacht Mayflower for a week-end cruise, will return to Washington at once, arriving about 4:30 p. m. today. Snow and sleet were given officially as the cause of his return.

Secretary Lansing said no new information had been received from the German government concerning the submarine question, but it was expected at any time. The secretary plans to see the president tonight.

Unofficial advice from Berlin stated that Ambassador Gerard had forwarded a preliminary report. It had not arrived early today.

President Wilson had gone aboard the Mayflower on another week-end cruise down the Potomac. The president took with him all the data on the Sussex and other cases prepared by the state department. He planned to remain away until tomorrow night or Monday.

Administration officials have agreed to defer any decisive step until full opportunity has been allowed the German government to present its side of the case.

This afternoon no word had been received from Ambassador Gerard and the news dispatches from Berlin saying Germany disclaimed responsibility for destruction of the Sussex was the only information before officials.

May 16 to 26 is Date for Y. M. C. A. Campaign

The committee in charge of the Young Men's Christian association building campaign, of which A. H. Perfect is chairman, has definitely decided to wage the campaign from May 16 to 26. This conclusion was reached Saturday. Many of the members of the committee met at the Anthony hotel at noon for luncheon with E. E. Stacey, state Y. M. C. A. secretary, and Paul Taylor, president of the Huntington association.

Ernest L. Mogge, building campaign manager of Indiana, will come to Fort Wayne Monday, at which time plans for the campaign will be discussed and formed. Mr. Mogge is considered the most successful campaign manager in the United States, as results showed in the Michigan City and Anderson campaigns, where more than the required sums were raised.

APRIL SNOWFALL IS OVER A VAST REGION

All East of Mississippi North of Gulf States Experiences It.

Washington, April 8.—Snowstorms extending over the Ohio valley and Canada have been moving eastward and northward today and promised to cover almost the whole region east of the Mississippi and north of the gulf states. Temperatures had dropped below seasonal averages in most of that territory, but no extreme cold was experienced. Snow and rain for tonight was predicted by the weather bureau for the Ohio river valley and the lower lake region and it may continue tomorrow. The storm in the Ohio valley is expected to last into Sunday with a possibility of freezing temperatures in part of that region.

What the Week Promises.
In its forecast for the week beginning Sunday the weather bureau says: "Unseasonably cool weather will prevail the first half of the week over the great central valleys and the districts east thereof with probably frosts, except the Florida peninsula, and freezing temperatures throughout the Mississippi and Ohio valleys, the lake region, the middle Atlantic and New England states."

"The latter part of the week will be much warmer."

"The storm that now covers the Ohio valley and the middle Atlantic states will advance northeastward and be attended by snows Sunday in the Ohio valley and the lower lake region and snow or rain in the north Atlantic states. With this exception generally fair weather will prevail throughout the country during the coming week."

Six families living in the building were obliged to flee the flames in their night clothes. The building was wrecked.

HENS REFUSE TO BE LED, BUT WOMEN'S PLAN WINS.

Vincennes, Ind., April 8.—Women of the First Baptist church at Bicknell, wishing to advertise a sale of chickens to raise money for repainting the parsonage, planned to lead their hens from the public square to market. Many women appeared in the square, each carrying a hen under her arm; but the chickens refused to be led when the signal was given. However the effort served the purpose, for the hens sold quickly at the market and enough money was obtained.

WANTS HER MARRIAGE TO BROTHER ANNULLED

Divorce Suit at Anderson Discloses Very Unusual Situation.

Anderson, Ind., April 8.—Mrs. Ethel Snell, 22, has filed in the court a petition for annulment of her marriage in 1912, to a man who said his name was Charles Snell. The plaintiff alleges that soon after the marriage she discovered that her husband was her brother and that his real name is Carl Sinn. It is stated in the complaint that Rev. J. Boyd Jones, of Terre Haute, formerly of Anderson, officiated in the marriage when the couple called at his home.

Mrs. Snell explained in the complaint that she is ten years younger than her brother-husband and that while she and her brother were young they became orphans and were reared in separate families. It is further alleged that Snell finally learned of his sister's whereabouts, and seeing that she did not recognize him, he perpetrated a criminal hoax by persuading her to marry him. She further asserted that she did not know that she had a brother living until after she was told by her husband that he was her brother. She alleged also that her husband soon after their marriage and without obtaining a divorce, was married to another woman in Louisville.

NO TRACE OF FARM HAND'S $500 ROLL

The Fort Wayne police department has been unable to gain any trace of the $500 roll of bills that James C. Crowell, a farm hand employed near South Whitley, says he lost in this city Friday. A thorough search was made about the Palace hotel, Main and Harrison streets, where Crowell stopped Thursday night, but nothing was learned there. Crowell tells the police he is positive he had the bill-fold containing the money in the inside pocket of his vest at the time he purchased a ticket at the Pennsylvania station for Columbia City, Friday. He had $3 in another pocketbook from which he took money to buy his ticket. Arriving at Columbia City he missed his $500 and at once returned to Fort Wayne and enlisted the aid of the police. Crowell cannot say whether he was robbed or merely lost his money. When he retired to bed at the hotel here he stuffed both his pocketbooks up the sleeve of his undershirt and is positive he had them both at the depot.

WE GET HINT TO WITHDRAW

Time for American Army to Get Out of Mexico, Says Carranza Official.

HAS ACCOMPLISHED PURPOSE, HE HOLDS

Declares Villa's Power is Forever Broken There by His Flight.

El Paso, Tex., April 8.—The American troops have accomplished their object in destroying Villa's military power and should therefore withdraw from Mexico without delay, was the view expressed today by a well-known member of the Carranza government speaking unofficially.

"The punitive force," he said, "has done all that it could expect to do. It has shattered the forces of Villa, who is now a fugitive robbed of all prestige and power he ever had among the people. The peons may be ignorant, but they are no fools. They will never again respect a man who turned tail and ran like a coward before the Yankees, without even making a stand."

Sees Serious Phase.

"Meantime it must be admitted that the Mexican people have behaved well toward the American troops. They have received them courteously. But to allow them to remain in Mexico indefinitely, 20,000 men hunting for a single bandit who may not be caught in months, is another matter. To allow them to continue their progress to the south indefinitely is still more serious.

"Americans would not tolerate the presence of Canadian military forces within their borders. Similarly the presence of Americans is beginning to irritate the Mexican people. It looks and feels like a surrender of sovereignty."

With Villa crushed, now is the logical time for the punitive force to withdraw. No cause of conflict have yet arisen, and the affair has so far turned out fortunately for both sides."

Villa Approaches Parral.

Such information as turned up from Mexican sources today said that Francisco Villa had reached the environs of Parral and had sent emissaries into the town to test the spirit of the garrison and also to obtain provisions. No verification of the report was possible, but the fact that the bandit was reliably reported to have been only fifty miles from Parral two days ago gave color to the story.

This information served at least to act as a considerable damper on the hopes of those who thought that the bandit's career might be ended by an

LAW MAKES TAX DODGER

Declares S. M. Foster in Address to Indianapolis Lunch Club.

PRESENT SYSTEM IS SHARPLY ASSAILED

Fort Wayne Man Discusses Preliminary Steps for New Tax Deal.

Indianapolis, April 8.—Preliminary steps toward a New Tax Deal in Indiana, was the theme discussed by Samuel M. Foster, of Fort Wayne, before the Saturday Lunch club here, at its meeting at noon today. Mr. Foster's address follows:

"There is one field of my life's activity which our chairman has failed to mention. In his effort to be kind and courteous rather than truthful and accurate, he has refrained from telling you that I am a tax dodger. I refer to this matter frankly in order that I may benefit from that open confession which the Bible says is good for the soul, and with the further purpose of placing myself at the start on rapport with my audience. If you are disposed to judge me out of my own mouth and condemn me on my own testimony, I will pause long enough to permit him among you that is without sin to cast the first stone. A broad roll or a ten cent will answer if there is no stone available. I knew by your appearance and without this silent testimony that I was addressing a body of prosperous, substantial, well to do men. I am not proud of being a tax dodger. I don't boast of it. I don't like the name. I'd rather not be one, and I wouldn't be were it not for the fact that the laws of our state compel me to make choice between being a tax dodger and suffering confiscation of from fifty to 100 per cent, of certain proportions of my income. And as our forefathers found justification in their revolution against their king by declaring that resistance to tyrants was obedience to God, so I take refuge in the statement that self preservation is the first law of nature. I know of nothing in which there is more pretense, subterfuge and false assumption of virtue, barring perhaps religion and politics, than in this matter of tax paying and tax evasion.

Various Kinds of Tax Dodgers.

GERMAN SAILOR HERE ON CROSS-LAND HIKE

Walter Wanderwel, 21 years old, a sailor in the German navy, arrived in Fort Wayne Saturday morning on his cross country hike from New York to San Francisco. He left New York on March 16 and has not had a hat on his head since that date. His outer wearing apparel consists of a shirt, pair of knee pants, stockings and a pair of heavy shoes. His limbs from the top of his stockings to the bottom of his pants are bare, but notwithstanding his scant wearing apparel he has not had a resemblance of a cold.

Wanderwel is making his way across country to the western coast, from which point he will sail with the hope of reaching home. He would have sailed from New York but for the fact that the Atlantic ocean is not a very safe place for a German sailor to be at the present time. Wanderwel says he has been made prisoner on two different occasions by the English, but each time was released.

WHITE SLAVE TRAILS IN NORTHERN INDIANA

Evidence Points to Bold Operations by Gang in Past Two Years.

South Bend, Ind., April 8.—United States District Attorney L. E. Shack, of Indianapolis, is on the trail of an organized gang of white slaves, said to be operating in northern Indiana cities. According to information in the possession of the federal officials the white slaves have for the last two years been boldly operating between South Bend and Chicago, at Gary, Hammond and East Chicago.

Charges filed in the United States court at Hammond, presided over by A. J. Surridge, against Frank Morando, aged 26; Frank Marsala, aged 27, and Mabel Fusco, aged 21, are to the effect that they have been transporting girls from Chicago to Gary for immoral purposes. The men have been placed under bonds of $5,000 and the woman under a bond of $2,000.

Crown Prince's Troops Make New Dent in Line

London, April 8.—The salient in the French lines west of the Meuse with the village of Bethincourt at its sharp angle is being pounded on both sides by the crown prince's troops, which in their last drive succeeded in making a new dent in the line southwest of Bethincourt.

The success was achieved near Haucourt village, the important position lost by the French on Wednesday, the Germans gaining a footing in two small field works between Haucourt and Hill number 287, which lies two-thirds of a mile to the south of the village.

On the other side of the salient there has also been sharp fighting but according to Paris today the advantage here was with the French, who bested their adversaries in grenade combats between Bethincourt and Chateauvert.

There has been little fighting else-

ENDS HIS LIFE WITH SHOTGUN

Despondency Over Illness Causes Gilbert McNabb to Suicide.

BLOWS OFF ENTIRE TOP OF HIS HEAD

Wife Finds Body in Kitchen When She Goes to Prepare Breakfast.

Gilbert McNabb, 40 years old, a well known farmer residing two miles north of Leo on the Spencerville road, committed suicide Saturday morning by blowing off the top of his head with a shotgun, fragments of his skull breaking out a window pane. His head was blown to shreds and parts of his brain were found upon the ceiling of the kitchen of his home where the deed was committed.

Two weeks ago McNabb suffered an attack of la grippe and since then he had been despondent and melancholy much of the time. Worry over his condition is believed to have affected his mind.

McNabb arose early Saturday morning without disturbing his wife and while she lay asleep committed the act. He had closed all the doors and had taken every precaution not to arouse his wife, succeeding so well that she did not even hear the report of the gun.

About 5:30 o'clock she arose and going to the kitchen to prepare breakfast made the horrible discovery. McNabb lay on the floor with fragments of his brain and skull scattered over the entire kitchen.

According to Mrs. McNabb her husband seemed in better spirits Friday than he had for several days and had come to Fort Wayne to pay his taxes. Though she knew he was greatly worried, she did not have the least intimation that he contemplated suicide.

Pushed Trigger With a Stick.

However, McNabb planned his death most carefully, selecting an hour when there was little possibility of his plans being thwarted. A double-barreled shotgun was used, but only one barrel was discharged. Sitting on a chair he placed the barrels against his head and with a small stick pushed the trigger.

He had not been dead long when Mrs. McNabb arose and found him. This widow and one child survive.

Coroner J. E. McArdle was called and made a thorough investigation and will render a verdict that McNabb came to his death by his own hand while in a fit of despondency.

MARKLE SELECTED FOR THE 1917 CONFERENCE

Huntington County Town is Next for Evangelical Church Body.

Huntington, Ind., April 8.—Markle, Huntington county, won over South Bend for the 1917 conference of the Evangelical association now in progress here, and next year's meeting will be held at that point.

The recommendation from the general conference to extend the time limit of pastors from five to seven years was voted down by a majority of five. The proposal to make the president of the Ladies' Aid society a member of the quarterly conference was adopted.

Rev. I. S. Fisher, of South Bend, submitted his report on the episcopal fund, saying that $1,919.70 had been raised for the salaries of bishops.

The Young People's Alliance of the Emmanuel church here had a rally last night, at which Rev. George Pullman, of Rochester, president of the Indiana branch; Rev. Clyde Boyer, of Fort Wayne; and Rev. Ralph Louise, of Huntington, were the speakers. A special music number was a violin solo by Rev. C. A. Glass, a blind evangelist of the Methodist conference.

The day has passed when a man who has failed in everything else can enter the ministry declared Dr. G. B. Kimmel, professor of practical theology in the Evangelical seminary at Naperville, Ill., in an address before the Indiana conference of the Evangelical Association here today. He said the seminary had an enrollment of forty-two students, most of whom were graduates from Northwestern college, a joint institution with the seminary. He deplored the fact that so few preachers appeal from their pulpits for young men to enter the ministry. He declared an investigation revealed the fact that none of the students had been solicited by their pastors to enter the ministry.

A large part of yesterday's session of the conference was devoted to discussion of the new finance plan presented by the Rev. George Johnson, of Cleveland, O., who is the secretary treasurer of the General Missionary society of the church. The Indiana conference was apportioned $12,000, to be raised during the fiscal year for the various benevolences of the church. This sum is to be reapportioned among the local congregations.

Montana has been opened as a missionary field by the church, Rev. Mr. Johnson reported. He said the war has seriously affected the work of the church in Germany, reducing the number of active members one-half.

Philadelphia, April 8.—As much as six inches of snow fell in many parts of Pennsylvania and New Jersey today, the weather bureau in this city reporting the storm as a record-breaker for this time of the year. In Philadelphia up to 10 a. m. there was a fall of three inches and two inches of snow covered much of Delaware. The snow is expected to turn to rain.

ROOSEVELT'S FRIEND COMES OUT FOR ROOT

Robert Bacon Aids Boom for Nomination of New York Senator.

New York, April 8.—The movement for the nomination of Elihu Root for the presidency launched last night by a statement bearing the signatures of 74 prominent republicans is supported by Robert Bacon, former member of Col. Roosevelt's cabinet and one of his closest friends.

In a statement published today Mr. Bacon says: "My first choice is Elihu Root; my second choice Theodore Roosevelt." Mr. Bacon last week was host at a luncheon which brought Mr. Root and Roosevelt together since the latter opposed Mr. Roosevelt at the republican convention in 1912.

Wm. Barnes, republican national committeeman, many of whose adherents signed the Root amendment, declares there was nothing behind it except a desire to promote the nomination of Mr. Root. He denied emphatically a report that the statement was a maneuver to help the candidacy of Roosevelt. It was learned the Root movement crystallized at a conference held here last Thursday at the Union League club.

Mr. Root, it is said, knew that the statement was to be issued and offered no objection. Nineteen of those who signed the statement are delegates from New York state to the national convention. Among them are two of the former delegates at large, United States Senator James W. Wadsworth, jr., and State Senator Eben B. Brown. After outgiving the public services of Mr. Root the statement concludes: "While he has declined to become a candidate even for the high public office, yet if nominated for the presidency by the coming national convention at Chicago his sense of public duty must compel his acceptance."

STATE FINANCE BOARD IS OUT WITH A REPLY

Says Judge Myers "Incorrectly Stated Facts" in Keynote Speech.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 8.—In reply to the keynote speech of Judge Quincy A. Myers at the republican state convention Wednesday, the state board of finance has issued a lengthy statement asserting that Judge Myers "incorrectly stated the facts" and reiterating that the state is entirely out of debt for the first time in 83 years.

The statement contends that the state supreme court has held that the Wabash and Erie canal certificates, referred to by Judge Myers as an outstanding claim against the state, did not constitute a valid claim. The statement denied that the state owed Purdue university $340,500, as asserted by Judge Myers, but contended that the money was a permanent trust fund and that only the interest could be paid on it.

"However, if it be considered a debt," concludes the statement, "there is today, in cash, in the state treasury, $1,790,281.88, which is more than sufficient to protect this trust fund." The statement was signed by Gov. Ralston, Dale J. Crittenden, auditor of state, and George A. Bittler, treasurer of state, constituting the state board of finance.

PAROLE OF TRENTMAN NOW EXPECTED SOON

Indianapolis, April 8.—Reports are current in various circles that Anthony D. Trentman, a Fort Wayne business man, who shot and killed the head waiter of the Anthony hotel, in that city, and who was sentenced to serve two to twenty-one years in prison for manslaughter, will be paroled by Governor Ralston before the expiration of his minimum two years' term. Many very prominent members of the democratic party in Indiana, it is said, have asked clemency for Trentman.

The Governor's last word on the Trentman parole was to the effect that he had not yet considered it fully, but it is understood that the parole is to be issued soon—or so the rumors go that are floating in certain quarters.

MILLION TINY FLAGS OF BELGIUM ON SALE

Daughters of Revolution in Plan to Aid Women and Children.

New York, April 8.—Today one hundred thousand Daughters of the Revolution put on sale throughout the United States one million tiny Belgian flags in an effort to raise a fund of one million dollars for the benefit of destitute women and children in Belgium and northern France. The day was selected because it is the forty-first birthday anniversary of King Albert, of Belgium.

Queen Elizabeth, of Belgium, has endorsed the movement in a message to Mrs. Wm. Cummings Story, president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution. The governors of 35 states and mayors of about 2,000 cities gave their approval by designating today as Belgium flag day.

The work is under the supervision of the commission for relief in Belgium. This is said to be the first time in history in which so many women have engaged in a single charitable effort.

Many checks, containing contributions, were received at the headquarters yesterday. Alexander J. Hemphill, chairman of the committee, appointed by President Wilson to aid relief work in Belgium, sent a cablegram to King Albert congratulating him upon the anniversary of his birthday.

FARM VALUES CLIMBING BY LEAPS AND BOUNDS

Washington, April 8.—Agricultural values are increasing almost by leaps and bounds. Figures made public today by the department of agriculture show that values for the United States taken as a whole increased 35.7 per cent in the past four years and 11.5 last year. The figures are based upon reports from the department's field agents. The value of farm lands without improvements is estimated at $45.50 per acre, compared with $40.85 a year ago; $36.23 four years ago. The exceptional increase of last year are attributed in part to the reaction in the south following last year's temporary depression and to the stimulus of war prices, particularly of grain.

BOY SCOUTS TO ENGAGE IN A GOLD BADGE HUNT

Novel Event is Planned by
L. O. Wetzel, as Soon as Weather Permits.

Scout Commissioner of Indiana, L. O. Wetzel, who has thus far organized six boy scout troops in Fort Wayne, has begun to plan some novel and unique events in which the boys will engage this spring and summer. The first one will be a gold medal hunt and promises to be an exceedingly interesting affair.

In reality it is called a "Treasure Hunt." As soon as the weather settles down and gives indication that spring is really here, Mr. Wetzel will leave the city some Friday afternoon and hide the gold medal. He will take down compass directions as he leaves the city and somewhere within a radius of five miles of Fort Wayne will conceal the gold medal.

Saturday morning after every boy is equipped for a day's outing and ready to start the hike he will furnish them with compass directions. The scout who is successful in finding the medal will be given the privilege of keeping it.

Troop No. 2, of the First Presbyterian church, and troop No. 3, of Trinity Episcopal church, accompanied Mr. Wetzel to Bethany church Friday evening, where preliminary arrangements were made for the organization of troop No. 6. Indications are that this troop will begin with a membership of nearly twenty.

dodgers and there are some who do not realize that they are what they are. My own views on the matter may be illustrated by the story of a man who, having departed this life, found himself undergoing the inevitable interview with good St. Peter. The examination had gone along with apparent satisfaction to the new arrival when at last the custodian of the key of heaven turned a leaf and said:

"How about your taxes. I don't find your name upon the tax duplicate. Were you a tax dodger?"

"No indeed," replied the candidate, throwing out his chest. I made it a practice every year to buy lot of gravel road and street improvement bonds and in this way I was able to make out that I had no taxable property."

"A wry look somewhat tinged with pain, spread over the countenance of the Heavenly doorkeeper, as he said:

"Well, you may get into the elevator."

"After a few moments' waiting the candidate asked of an attendant, 'How soon does this elevator go up?'"

"This elevator doesn't go up," was the reply.

"The man who buys gravel road bonds to escape taxation seems to me no less a tax dodger than he who neglects to report his bank balance on the first day of March."

"I don't mean to say that there aren't some men and more women who live up to the letter of the law, but their estates are largely in the hands of trustees or guardians. If not, they soon will be."

Guilt Is Mitigated.

"Our guilt is somewhat mitigated by the fact that it is understood and agreed that we should be tax dodgers. In fact, if the legislatures of our state wanted to be entirely frank and outspoken, they would preface their laws pertaining to taxation with a preamble to the effect that in order that the industrious, economical and thrifty of our people may become well versed and expert in the practice of prevarication and evasion, that their regard for the sanctity of an oath may be lessened or destroyed; that their respect for the majesty of the law be overturned and the standard of citizenship placed on the lowest, possible level, it is therefore hereby enacted that all kinds of property, real, personal and fictitious shall be assessed and taxed at the same rate."

Where the Remedy Lies.

"It would seem a superfluous thing to take up the time in an effort to demonstrate to you how thoroughly our system of taxation has broken down, or in illustrating even a few of the inequalities that seem inseparably associated with our present system of assessment and taxation. Every one of you can recall in his own observation and experience many cases of the rank and unfairness and inequality of assessment. Now and then, however, we meet a man who says that the law is all right—all that is needed is a vigorous enforcement of the law. I, myself, am generally an advocate of that theory that the best way to get rid of a bad law is to enforce it, and that this will lead to its repeal. But the difficulty in this case is that it is not a statute that occasions the trouble but the constitution of the state, and to repeal the constitution is not an easy matter. We can't even amend it, let alone repeal it. The essential preliminary step toward tax reform is thorough revision by a constitutional convention."

Differs With Governor.

"If I remember correctly, our much esteemed governor said something of this sort in his message to the last legislature. Quoting the section of our constitution which declares that 'the general assembly shall provide by law for a uniform and equal rate of assessment and taxation,' he intimated that this sounded good to him and declared to the effect that the trouble was that the law was not generally and fearlessly enforced. I am of the opinion that our salvation, at least through the latter half of the century of our existence as a state, lies in the fact that the law has not been enforced and that by common consent there has been no pretense of enforcing it except in an occasional case of outrageous and flagrant tax evasion, when it takes on the nature of something akin to capital punishment. This phrase, 'uniform and equal' does have a pleasing sound even to the governor says, but applied to our system of taxation it is about as misleading as the statement that salvation is free. Salvation is free to the man that has nothing, and taxation is uniform and equal to the same class of people.

Enforcement of Tax Law.

"I suppose that the man who thinks that the remedy for the present chaotic and wretched condition of matters pertaining to taxation lies in a rigid, fearless and universal enforcement of the law bases his argument on the theory that if the laws were enforced so much property would be placed upon the tax duplicate that the rate of taxation could be very greatly reduced. If we were to turn round short and take to enforcing the letter of the law, where could you begin? What community should be made the goat and what would be happening in the meanwhile? I'm afraid it would turn out much as when, once upon a time, an enthusiastic conceived the idea that if all the people in the world should at the same instant let out a mighty shout, the volume of noise would be so great that it could be heard on the moon. The story goes that the thing was all arranged but when the moment came everybody was so intent on hearing the noise that nobody shouted except a deaf man on the Sandwich Islands."

"Now it is fair to assume that in all these years the best has been done that could have been done in this matter of enforcing the law. We have tried first one thing, then another. We have devised scheme after scheme, we have turned this and the other way, recalling to mind the old familiar doggerel originally applied to the shifty and elusive politician:

Winding in and winding out,
Leaving the matter still in doubt;
Whether the thing that made the track
Was going west or coming back."

"We have patched here and have patched there until at last we have come to a point that is reached when men try to repair a house in which sills and joints and studding have become so rotten that they will not hold a nail."

Cites An Example.

"Listen to this: Indianapolis, Feb. 21.—The State Board of Commissioners, in a letter to county assessors throughout the state today announced that 'On account of the low valuations made in the assessment of real estate it has been decided that 25 per cent. shall be deducted from the assessment of true cash value of personal property for the purpose of equalization, but it must be understood that the true cash value is the basis of assessment, otherwise the 25 per cent. should not be deducted.'"

"That is to say that because rates of assessment and taxation are not uniform and equal, never have been and never will be, nor even approximately so after 65 years of effort, therefore, 25 per cent. may be taken off from the assessment of certain kinds of property, the real value of which is clearly apparent and cannot be concealed. Just where our state board of tax commissioners find a warrant in law to justify their good intentions I am not able to say."

Taxes and Income.

"One of the maxims regarding taxation is that taxation ought always to have regard to ability to pay. This brings up consideration of the relation between the taxes that we pay, and the income derived from the property on which the taxes are paid. I don't think we often consider the matter from this angle. Property that yields 4 per cent. income can't afford to pay the same rate of taxation upon the principal as that which yields ten per cent. But I tell you what it can do. Property that yields 4 per cent. can afford to pay the same rate of taxation upon the income, that property that yields ten per cent. can pay, and there is no reason why it shouldn't."

Fort Wayne Illustration.

"Let me illustrate: I own a business block in Fort Wayne. I am also a stockholder in the Wayne Knitting Mills and the German American National Bank. I am not trying to sneak in some advertising for these institutions, though they are both worthy of the best I could do. But if I take my own institutions for illustration no one can complain. Assume also that I own 250 shares of Pennsylvania Railroad company stock. When the taxes upon these four properties are each converted into terms of tax upon income, the result is as follows:

The Knitting Mills tax amounted last year to 81.2 per cent. on my income received from my investment in that stock. On the income received from my business block the tax amounted to 181.2 per cent. on my income from my bank stock the tax amounted to 28 per cent., and on my income from Pennsylvania railroad stock the tax amounted to 431.2 per cent. Now suppose I move—change my place of residence. Suppose I go to Decatur. The tax on the first three investments that I have enumerated will remain the same. But that on the railroad stock will change. In Decatur the tax would amount to 721.2 per cent. of my income and that too, after deducting the 25 per cent. from the value of the stock which, the gracious dispensation of the state board illegally permits. Suppose I move to Hammond, the tax would be 86 per cent. If it were not for the gracious dispensation of the state tax commission the tax in Decatur would be 962.3 per cent., and in Hammond 1141.2 per cent."

Why the Difference?

"Now why should there be this difference in the tax upon income from these various sources? The dollar received from the Wayne Knitting Mills weighs as much and will buy as much as that which comes from the bank or railroad stock. Why, then, shouldn't it bear its full proportion of the burdens of government instead of one-third or one-fifth? Assuming that it should, how can we accomplish this? By merely abolishing the tax on personal property and putting it on the income, but we can't do this so long as our present constitutional provision prevails. Many of our people are up in arms against the federal income tax of one, two or three per cent., as the case may be. I'm willing to admit that it is a most righteous tax in general with several most unrighteous provisions in particular. But I believe in time these faults will all be ironed out. But what would we say of an income tax amounting to twenty, thirty, fifty, seventy-five or 100 per cent. of our income? How long would the government survive if such a tax were levied in times of peace? And yet the laws of Indiana when enforced, as once in awhile they are enforced by mistake or malice, authorities just this sort of confiscation and calls it taxation."

One Man and His Wife.

"There came into Indiana not long ago a man and his wife from one of the eastern states. In their previous home state they had never seen a tax collector. When he called on them he found them living in two or three rooms. After assessing their household furniture, he asked them, as was his duty, if they had any money in bank. Yes, they had $700 in certificates of deposit at 3 per cent. Down it went on the tax return as the law requires, and when the next year came around they paid $35 taxes on their little hoard of savings—$14 more than they received in interest. Do you tell me that what we need is a fearless and universal enforcement of the present law? I say unto you, that when the state took $35 in taxes from this man and woman, 166.23 per cent. of what their money earned, penalized them for having saved their hard earned money, it committed a sin against God and a crime against humanity: it is to the everlasting disgrace of our state that such extortion can be practiced with the sanction of the law. There are two things that ought to be protected—ignorance and honesty. In Indiana we penalize them whenever they are displayed in reference to taxation."

"As many of you know, the proposition to abolish the personal property tax and especially the tax on that which merely represents indebtedness is being considered by many states in the union. Word has recently come that the legislature of the last state where such a movement would be expected to have any chances of success is at this moment considering a bill which provides for the abolition of the personal property tax and the substitution of a state income tax in its place and 'mirabile dictu,' the bill was introduced in the New York legislature by a republican member and promises to receive generous support at the hands of men of that political faith. I take it that under our present constitutional restrictions, an income tax that would deliver the goods could hardly be enacted in this state. It is fair to say that in most of the states that have tried it an income tax has not been a success. This is partly due to our dislike for new and direct methods, but principally because the administration of the law has been entrusted to local officials. With our present methods for levying and collecting taxes here in Indiana, an angel sent from God could hardly make the most perfect measure of taxation a moderate success. But the state of Wisconsin seems to have solved the problem. The most important thing done was to take the administration of the law out of politics and put it in the hands of a state commission, a permanent body of men, appointed for long terms, receiving adequate salaries and quite independent of political or local influences. The law has now been in force five years and seems to be working well."

Merely a Substitute.

"It is not an additional tax, but as I have suggested, a substitute for the thoroughly discredited personal property tax in so far as the same applies to intangible property. The law expressly exempts all intangible personal property such as money, credits, notes, stocks and bonds, also household goods, farm machinery and a few minor items."

"Regarding the year 1912 the tax commission reported that 'the net yield of the income tax was considerably more than twice the amount raised heretofore on the class of property exempted under the law, and what is even better, there were more tax payers and fewer tax victims than before.'"

The Wisconsin income tax is not a state tax except in the sense that it applies to the whole state and is collected by state machinery. There are 41 income tax assessors chosen by the tax commission after a rigid civil service examination with entire disregard to political affiliation. The proceeds of the tax are distributed 90 per cent. to the local districts where it is collected and only 10 per cent. goes to the state. This 10 per cent. was intended to meet the expense of administering the law but it has yielded double what was needed."

"We, in this country, have never viewed taxation in its proper light. We have wanted not to know when we paid taxes or how much we paid. Ignorance has been bliss and wisdom a bluster. We have been quite complacent and entirely willing to pay large amounts when the tax went in with the purchase price of our necessities and our luxuries, thus demonstrating the practical wisdom of the statesman who said, that tax on consumption yields the most features with the least squawk. We have never taken kindly to new and unusual methods of taxation, and this has perhaps been natural, for new methods of taxation have always meant additional taxation. Hence our people have always had their hammers ready for every suggestion looking to tax revision."

Should Be Matter of Honor.

"Tax paying ought to be a matter of honor. It is one of the ways in which a man can show his patriotism in times of peace. But our system ought to be such that he who lives closest to the spirit and letter of the law would be deemed worthy of the highest regard instead of being considered as one who needs a guardian and a trustee for his estate. Some day that condition will come about and when it does come, men who are known to evade the law instead of being applauded will be ostracized. They will be written down as one who cheats at cards, a foe to society and unworthy of the respect of law abiding and patriotic citizens. But before you can secure respect for a law and compliance with its provisions, it must be so just and equitable that in living up to it men feel themselves self-respecting citizens and not victims of pocket picking or highway robbery under the protection of the law. We need a new deal from the ground up before we can accomplish this, and the first thing in obtaining a new deal is to strike off the shackles with which we are bound hand and foot by the present constitutional provision. We must have a new constitution for Indiana."

troops of a speedy termination to the pursuit has given new life to the alarmists on the border. The stories of the massing of Carranza troops in proximity to the international line, which had died away for a period, have been revived in all their old vigor and with several additions. While there is no question that there are considerable numbers of Carranza soldiers concentrated at various points within twenty miles of the Sonora and Culihuahua line, there is equally no doubt that their numbers have been greatly exaggerated by the alarmists.

No exact estimate is possible as the troops are constantly shifting from town to town, but Americans who have passed through northern Sonora and Culihuahua in the last two weeks, are convinced that the total is not more than 10,000 and possibly less.

THE ORDER TO FUNSTON.

War Department's Order is Made Public at Washington.

Washington, April 8.—Recurrence of reports that American troops were to be withdrawn from Mexico were met today at the state department with a statement by Secretary Lansing that no such withdrawal was contemplated so far as he knew and at the war department by publication for the first time of the original order to Major General Funston. The order says:

"You will promptly organize an adequate force of military troops under the command of Brig. Gen. John J. Pershing and will direct him to proceed promptly across the border in pursuit of the Mexican band which attacked the town of Columbus, N. M., and the troops thereof the morning of March 9. These troops will be withdrawn to American territory as soon as the de facto government of Mexico is able to relieve them of this work. In any event the work of these troops will be regarded as finished as soon as Villa's band or bands are known to be broken up."

"In carrying out these instructions you are authorized to employ whatever guides or interpreters are necessary, you are given authority to employ such transportation, including motor transport, with necessary civilian personnel as may be required."

"You are instructed to make all practicable use of the aeroplanes at San Antonio for observation. Telegraph for whatever reinforcements or material you need. Notify this office as to force selected and expedite movement."

Publication of the order discloses that it made no mention of taking "Villa dead or alive" which was described as included in an official order and it was pointed out that instructions to disperse the Villa bandits over whatever action its execution entails."

It was noted, however, that the order does say the work of the American troops would be regarded as finished when the Villa band is known to be broken up and that they would be withdrawn to American territory when the Carranza government was able to relieve them of the chase.

BLACK OPAL HAS CEASED TO EXIST

This is the interesting report brought from New South Wales by Albert Ramsey, of London, who is said to be the world's largest opal dealer.

"When I was in New York six years ago everyone was excited over the black opal," he said. "At that time there were 2,500 men working in the mine producing them. Today there are less than 100 men in the mine and they are finding nothing. The black opal, therefore, now becomes an exceedingly rare and valuable stone."

"England has banned the shipment of rough diamonds. They are using them on cannon parts and in the manufacture of various instruments. They are afraid to send them to America because they figure the Germans would corner the market. The Germans have no way of getting hold of rough diamonds and would like to put them to the same use that the British do."

Report Says Too Much Insurance is Carried by the Township.

The state accounting board has completed its report of its recent investigation of the office of Henry P. Scherer, trustee of Wayne township. The report was received by the township trustee some days ago.

The report points out that the trustee is now, and had been prior to his election, acting as agent for various insurance companies, and says that the insurance on some of the buildings were excessive. Mr. Scherer explains that some policies he has dropped out, while others are now too low. He says that he sold the insurance to the township at the same rates as he would charge anybody else. At the suggestion of the examiners and the advisory board Mr. Scherer reduced his insurance in accordance with their wishes and has returned to the township treasury the amount of $26.30.

"The expenditures for the relief of the poor for the first half of 1913 were high," the report says. "The trustee reduced this expense to a great extent during the year. He received from Henry Scholtz the sum of $26.12 for relief given during the year 1913, and which was a reimbursement of the amount of aid given, but was not deposited with the county auditor until Feb. 13, 1914."

The report further points out that he withdrew from his depositories various sums of money in excess of the amount due him as salary as trustee, these excess withdrawals amounting to $1,073. This amount and all other amounts have been refunded.

Notes of the Courts.

Prosecutor Frank A. Enrick states that there will be no proceedings brought against Melville Chapp, who is one of the three republican nominees for legislative representatives nominated in the Allen county primaries, March 7, for having failed to file a certified expense account of his campaign. He was put on the slate without being consulted, made no canvass and spent no money. His violation is only technical.

In the superior court Lawrence Crawford has begun suit against Nathan Hutton and others to quiet title to real estate. K. C. Larwill appears for the plaintiff.

Albert Ramsey, of London

San Francisco, Cal., April 8.—The black opal, which a few years ago was great of a failure in the jewelry world, has ceased to exist.

This is the interesting report brought from New South Wales by Albert Ramsey, of London, who is said to be the world's largest opal dealer.

"When I was in New York six years ago everyone was excited over the black opal," he said. "At that time there were 2,500 men working in the mine producing them. Today there are less than 100 men in the mine and they are finding nothing. The black opal, therefore, now becomes an exceedingly rare and valuable stone."

"England has banned the shipment of rough diamonds. They are using them on cannon parts and in the manufacture of various instruments. They are afraid to send them to America because they figure the Germans would corner the market. The Germans have no way of getting hold of rough diamonds and would like to put them to the same use that the British do."

THE SENTINEL'S DAILY SCRIPTURE READING

Romans 14:1-13.

- 1 Him that is weak in the faith receive ye, but not to doubtful disputations.
- 2 For one believeth that he may eat all things: another, who is weak, eateth herbs.
- 3 Let not him that eateth despise him that eateth not; and let not him which eateth not judge him that eateth: for God hath received him.
- 4 Who art thou that judgest another man's servant? to his own master he standeth or falleth; yea, he shall be holden up: for God is able to make him stand.
- 5 One man esteemeth one day above another: another esteemeth every day alike. Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind.
- 6 He that regardeth the day, regardeth it unto the Lord; and he that regardeth not the day, to the Lord he doth not regard it. He that eateth, eateth to the Lord, for he giveth God thanks; and he that eateth not, to the Lord he eateth not, and giveth God thanks.
- 7 For none of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself.
- 8 For whether we live, we live unto the Lord; and whether we die, we die unto the Lord: whether we live therefore, or die, we are the Lord's.
- 9 For to this end Christ both died, and rose, and revived, that he might be Lord both of the dead and living.
- 10 But why dost thou judge thy brother? or why dost thou set at nought thy brother? for we shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ.
- 11 For it is written, As I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God.
- 12 So then every one of us shall give account of himself to God.
- 13 Let us not therefore judge one another any more: but judge this rather, that no man put a stumblingblock or an occasion to fall in his brother's way.

The Expense of Campaigning.

We have heard in Indiana during the past few months repeated protests against the expense to candidates who were forced to make a state or even a district canvass to secure nomination under the new state-wide primary law. The charge has been freely made that the man of merely ordinary financial means is practically barred; that only the wealthy can afford to make the race because they alone are in position to finance a campaign sufficiently to insure the possibility of success. The situation is brought forcibly to attention once more in the certified expense account recently filed by Mr. Goodrich, the republican nominee for governor who triumphed heavily over both Mr. McCray and Judge Myers.

The affidavit filed by Mr. Goodrich shows that he expended in round figures about $18,500 in making his campaign for the nomination. A little rapid mathematical calculation will be sufficient to convince one that Mr. Goodrich, shrewd business man that he is, is seeking the governorship for the honor it bestows and not in the hope of financial increment. The salary of the job is about $8,000 per year, with a four-year limit if one is elected—that "if" being always a contingency to be taken into account. No governor, under the constitution, can be elected to succeed himself. In other words, something like $32,000 is the best one can hope for from the governorship. Considerably more than half that sum has been expended by Mr. Goodrich in securing the nomination, and all of it, no doubt, expended in perfectly legitimate fashion. Confronting him yet, also, is the race he must make for election with its attendant expense. This will assuredly be a considerable sum, though perhaps not so large as that devoted to the primary campaign.

It may be contended that there was no necessity for this tremendous primary outlay—and the size of Mr. Goodrich's plurality certainly indicates that he could have won without so strenuous a campaign and without so great an expenditure. That phase of it, however, is easily explained by the psychological element that inspires one to leave no stone unturned in order to succeed after one is once into a thing. Mr. Goodrich and his lieutenants were out to win, and they determined to make a thorough job of it. That much they certainly accomplished. It should be said, also, that in Mr. Goodrich's case there is no occasion for either lamentation or sympathy. He is credited with being possessed, fortunately, of sufficient wealth to escape the likelihood of the pinchings of poverty even if he were to indulge in primary campaigns as a perennial recreation. To the man of ordinary financial status, however, the necessity for making a state-wide campaign of this magnitude is a prospect which might well lead him to conclude to turn the job of saving the country over to somebody else.

One of the early results of Colonel Roosevelt's declaration that the republicans can have him as their candidate for the presidency provided they take him at his own terms is now apparent in the frenzied efforts of something like a hundred prominent New York republicans to infuse new life in the Root presidential boom. Senator Root's age is against him, and he has said he doesn't want the presidential nomination, but the possibility of Colonel Roosevelt at the head of the republican ticket once more has set the old guard in a panic. It is running about in circles and barking like a dog.

And a map of Indiana eloquently portraying geographical distribution of the republican state nominees shows the big and important Twelfth congressional district literally gorging itself with one alternate delegate-at-large to the Chicago convention and one contingent presidential elector, one of whom will get a chance to go if the other fellow doesn't care to do so, and the second conditioned upon the double contingency of the republicans carrying Indiana and the principal obligingly stepping aside. It is certainly some feast for Twelfth district republicans!

Whether upon further investigation it shall prove as actual or as extensive as is now indicated or not, the discovery at Chicago of an alleged anarchist plot to assassinate all the rulers of Europe is a matter with which American authorities should not temporize. The reds constitute a very real menace wherever they are permitted to gain foothold, and Chicago in the past has had its full share of that. It is profoundly to be hoped that the officers, thus forewarned, will not desist until the entire plot is uprooted before it can be batched into its full action.

Mr. Harris not only concede that he was beaten for that republican nomination for attorney general, but he goes farther than that. He is willing to admit that he knows precisely who gave him that awful wallop in the convention.

GIRL HAS PET SEALS

MISS BESSIE GRAHAM

Five years ago the father of Miss Bessie Graham was killed while on a seal hunting trip in northern waters. The ship that brought his body to San Francisco also brought three baby seals, which Miss Graham adopted as pets.

For the past four years the seals have been going to school. Herbert Winston, seal trainer, has been the schoolmaster. He taught them to be trick seals and one of them has been earning sufficient money on the stage to support Miss Graham quite comfortably.

BLAKE'S PRISON SCHOOL.

(Denver Post.)

It was ten years ago that Chaplain John G. Blake took his position at the penitentiary at Canon City. And with the beginning of his work there began also a new life for the convicts imprisoned there. There was need for education, for enlightenment that these men who had sinned against their fellow-men might have a chance in their world when they went forth into it again. And Chaplain Blake found a means of bringing that enlightenment.

He started a school for convicts. There were those who did not even know their A B C's. There were others who were slightly farther advanced. There were still others who possessed good educations, and some with technical learning. The ones who knew nothing became the pupils. Those who knew more became the teachers under the direction of the chaplain. And the school became a success.

Pupils learning the wonders of the alphabet, and others learning the intricacies of civil engineering, sat side by side. Mexicans, teaching Americans the Spanish language, in turn went to school to other convict teachers who taught them German or Russian or Italian, according to their nationality.

An interlocking system it was, with every one giving and every one receiving, with the result that when the chaplain died March 20 the school which he had founded contained seventeen convict teachers, ranging in their lessons from reading and writing to Latin and Greek.

And that was only the beginning of the sixty-eight year-old chaplain's work. He believed it his duty to see that every man went forth into the world with a better understanding of what life meant and what a great, big, wonderful thing it really was. And so, from cell to cell he went, day after day, talking to them, advising them and cheering them. And the best of it was that these convicts listened to Chaplain Blake and heeded the advice that he gave, with the result that more than one man went forth from the prison really benefited by his stay there.

The Famous Red-Letter Edition of the Bible

The Big Print Red Letter Edition of the Bible now being offered by this paper to its readers should be in every home in this land. It is far and away the best edition ever offered to the public at anything like the wonderful price now placed before our readers.

The helpful information concerning the book of books, alone, would be easily worth the distribution price asked for this paper. This is printed in what might be called an "appendix" and consists of essays, carefully compiled statistics, and a general fund of information that will save many an hour of research for facts such as the general reader or student of the Bible most wants to know. The beauty of the text, however, with its large type and comprehensive marginal annotations, and the red letter printing of Christ's words in the New Testament, render this special edition "out of competition." It is not plus ultra—there is none other like it! See coupon in today's paper for unqualified terms.

Many bright colors as well as dozens of sweet and beautiful children made Minnet hall a scene of brightness and happiness this afternoon, so that April snows and some March winds that lagged behind to make trouble for Miss April, didn't make a bit of difference with the pretty party that Miss Maryvyn Pidgeon gave. Neither did the storm make any difference with Miss Maryvyn's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Pidgeon, who thus remembered her thirtieth birthday anniversary. Merry games and dancing with a number of cotillion figures with beautiful Japanese parasols for the girls and fancy caps for the boys as favors passed the time quickly. Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served at 5 o'clock and Easter colors appeared for the ice cream was like an egg with its yellow center while the frosted cakes were in pale pink and the candies were yellow. Miss Maryvyn was a picture in her pink silk frock with ribbons, slippers and stockings to match while the effort of the other girls in white and various light colors combined in the spring-like appearance of the scene. A number of the mothers were present with Mrs. Pidgeon to see that no one missed any of the fun and Mr. Trier was on hand to direct the games and the dancing while lively music kept the feet going. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Keplinger, of Cincinnati, an uncle and aunt of the hostess, were visitors at this good time which was enjoyed by Louise Metzger, Inez Hartzler, Catherine and Angela Gilmartin, Adeline Kraus, Virginia Thione, Margaret Ann Keegan, Isabell Freeman, Marguerite Pfeiffer, Gladys Young, Regine Minsky, Gladys Lindman, Gillian Polhams, Lenora Moffat, Anita Ackerman, Julia Calhoun, Helen Schair, Julia Bash, Elizabeth Uhlman, Charlotte Wolf, Catherine Barnes, Dorothy Auger, Grace Hanel, May Hoffelinger, Elizabeth Howelind, Margaret Hawking, Ruth Tepper, Eric Mulholland, Ben Tepper, Morgan Thione, Richard Blitt, John Watt, Edward and William White, James Jackson, Fletcher and Bill Hall, Billy Carman, Howard Quicksell, Albert Serrv, Jack and Billy Master, Norman Perrine.

WHEN LITTLE BOYS DRESS UP. By Betty Brown. The Norfolk, box pleated and belted coat is "sonny boy's" favorite, and the Norfolk was never more popular than this spring. The trousers are straight, rather wide at the knee in the newest Norfolks. Serge, worsted and cheviot make up very well in these little coat suits and there are very pretty patterns in striped galatea, colored pique and checked gingham suitable for warm weather.

THE late spring hat of the very small boy will be quite fussy. A broad sash that dangles over his shoulder will be the usual trimming, but narrow bands ending in long streamers will also be used.

WELL-KNOWN ANTWERP FOLK CELEBRATE GOLDEN WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

MR. AND MRS. P. P. DOERING.

Antwerp, Ohio, April 8.—In their cozy home, amid the comforts that reflect the golden autumnal sunshine of a busy, eventful and prosperous life, while surrounded by relatives and friends, Mr. and Mrs. P. painted cards in gilt, tied with a yellow ribbon bearing the names of the contracting parties and dates, 1888-1938, the cards being handwork and gift of Mrs. John L. Pocock. The house was beautifully decorated with flowers and potted plants, the gift of friends.

The day was an ideal one for an event of this kind and after several hours of enjoyment and the afternoon sun began its decline, the guests, with many well wishes for the future happiness of their venerable host and hostess, departed for their homes.

Those present were: Rev. and Mrs. R. C. Vancamp, Mrs. E. E. Pocock and husband, Mr. Joseph L. Doering and daughter Lucelle, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. M. P. Jacobs, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. BIGGEST ALL-STEEL DREDGE IN WORLD IS USED AT PANAMA.

Biggest all-steel dredge in the world, scooping up the dirt that blocks Culabra cut.

Colon, Panama, April 7. Just as easily as Mrs. Housewife scoops up flour and sifts it into her bread pan, the giant dredge, the Casacade, of Culabra cut, scoops up 15 wagon loads of Panama earth and rock at one scoop and drops it down where it won't interfere with canal traffic.

The Casacade is the biggest all-steel dredge in the world.

It is 114 feet in length with 55½ feet beam; 13½ depth of hold and a draught of 8½ feet.

There are four steel spouts on the Casacade, two weighing 35 tons each, and two weighing 32 tons each. With its huge bucket lifting 15 wagonloads of dirt every time it dips into the "slide," the dredge removes 14,000 cubic yards of earth and rock daily. It has a record of 17,000 cubic yards a day.

The monster-dredge was made in Germany and shipped to the zone in sections.

Col. Goethals says: 7,000,000 cubic yards of dirt must be removed before the Culabra cut is entirely free from obstruction caused by the dirt-avalanche that fell when Panama lost its "angle of repose."

"It is the intention," he says, "to pass ships through as soon as a channel is secured through the remaining 300 feet, and there is reasonable ground for assuming a channel may be maintained through the obstructed area."

Could Hardly Do Her Work.

Housework is trying on health and strength. Women are as much inclined to kidney and bladder trouble as men. Symptoms of aching back, stiff and sore joints and muscles, blurred vision, puffiness under eyes, should be given prompt attention before they lead to chronic and more serious ailment. Mrs. George Hawk, 935 Pearl street, Benton Harbor, Mich., writes: "I was awful bad, with such pain I could hardly do my work, and I am very thankful for Foley Kidney Pills. ONE MORE DAY TO ENTER HORSESHOE CONTEST.

One more day remains to enter The Sentinel horseshoe pitching contest, the entries to close Monday night at 6 o'clock. With a total of close to 200 already entered and more coming in each day, the big tourney will be the most comprehensive affair of the kind ever staged in Fort Wayne.

The tourney will be played off in one of the public parks, probably Swinney park, within a few weeks, and the program will be announced within a few days. The first event probably will be held on a Tuesday night, with intermission Wednesday and a continuance of play on Thursday, the finals to be run off Saturday afternoon. The breaks of a day are necessary for the revising and publishing of schedules for remaining participants.

THIRTY CANDIDATES

OUT AT PURDUE

Lafayette, Ind., April 8.—More than thirty candidates for the 1916 Purdue football team are working hard at spring practice. The squad is in charge of Capt. Hako and former Capt. Blocker. Cleo O'Donnell, who some time ago was selected to coach the football team in place of Andy Smith, who went to the University of California, is under contract to coach baseball at the Everett (Wash.) high school and will not be here for spring practice. He expects, however, to spend a couple of weeks here soon and make an outline of the course of training he desires to give the men.

MINNEAPOLIS PLANS

BIG FIELD MEET

Minneapolis, Minn., April 8.—Five hundred invitations to the eighth annual interscholastic field and track meet to be held on Northrop field May 27 have been sent out by the University of Minnesota Athletic association. All high schools in Minnesota and western Wisconsin and those in towns of more than 2,000 population in eastern Wisconsin, North and South Dakota and Iowa have been invited to participate. All other schools in the same districts also have been invited.

The javelin throw, it was announced, will be added this year to the list of events. To encourage entries from the smaller high schools where there has been no special training in track work, the meet will be divided into "A" and "B" classes.

BRONKIE IS OUT

OF GAME FOR GOOD

Indianapolis, April 8.—Herman Bronkie, captain and third baseman on the Indianapolis American association team, has quit baseball, according to an announcement received here from his home in Hartford, Conn. During the last half of last season Bronkie suffered a slump and the contract offered him by J. C. McGill, owner of the Indians, was not as lucrative as last year's. Manager Hendricks, of the Indians, expects to play Cozy Dolan at the third station.

More than a thousand people watched Captain George Byroade's Concordia college cadets in their drill at the gymnasium of the institution last night in as pretty a military show as ever was presented in this city. The entire student body, 250 in all, was in uniform, and participated in the drills and athletic maneuvers.

The boys worked with a precision that rarely is seen in student bodies, and performed the difficult drills and figures without a single hitch. It was a triumph for Concordia and Captain Byroade, and the thousand spectators gave the boys a hand time after time on their remarkable work.

The wall scaling was one of the most interesting of the contests and attracted a lot of applause. The big spectacular initiation drill, of course, was the most beautiful feature of the program, and was a grand finale to a splendid evening's entertainment.

After the show the boys were the guests of Captain Byroade at supper. The following were the contest results: Competitive drill for sergeants—First, Heinrichs, of Company D; second and third, Zierott and Frouse, Company C. Competitive drill for corporals—First, Stroedel, of Company A; second, Waltz, of Company B; third, Boester, of Company C.

Competitive drill for privates—First, Pollex, of Company A; second, Matthies, of Company C; third, Motkowski III, of Company D. Competitive drill for recruits—First, Wentzloff, of Company A; second, Meelering, of Company A; third, Troeger, of Company B.

Equipment race—First, Pollex, Company A; second, Marshke, Company B; third, Doederlin, II, Company C. Wall scaling—First, Company B; second, field staff and band; third, Company C. Time—7 2-5 seconds.

Team—Schroeder, Trinkl, Feltke. Pillow-pole fight—First, Steucker, Company C; second, Dietz, Company B; third, Bauer, Company D. Relay race—First, Company A; second, hand; third, Company D. Time—1 minute 4 seconds.

LOCAL BOWLERS ROLL SATURDAY NIGHT

Berghoffs Open State Tournament at Indianapolis.

Fort Wayne bowlers left in a special car early Saturday afternoon for Indianapolis to attend the state tournament. The Berghoff five of Fort Wayne will open the rolling at the big meet Saturday night and the other local team will be on the program early in the show.

Indianapolis, April 8.—With 75 quintets, 194 two-men teams representing the leading cities of Indiana, the seventh annual state bowling tournament was to open here tonight and will continue for twenty days. A large prize list has been announced and the officials have set aside $2,000 to be distributed among the winners. The Berghoff five of Fort Wayne will be one of the first teams to take the alleys tonight. St. Joseph county will be represented in the tournament with twelve five-men teams, six from South Bend and six from Mishawaka.

OH! GOOD NIGHT!

JOE FARREN

EVEN CROSS, SICK CHILDREN LOVE SYRUP OF FIGS

If feverish, bilious, constipated,

Don't scold your fretful, peevish child. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with sour waste. When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, indigestion, diarrhea, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul waste, the sour bile and fermenting food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well and playful child again. Children love this harmless "fruit laxative," and mothers can rest easy after giving it, because it never fails to make their little "insides" clean and sweet.

Keep it handy, Mother! A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Remember there are counterfeits sold here, so surely look and see that yours is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup. —Advertisement.

SEATTLE CITY DADS ARE REAL PATRIOTS

Councilman Allen Dale of Seattle

Seattle, Wash., April 2.—This city has a unique school of patriotism.

It is the council chamber where the flag is unfurled and every one stands for a moment at respectful attention before the official business sessions are opened.

The ceremony was introduced under resolution by Councilman Allen Dale who declared his belief that it would help to correct the encroachment of both special privilege and anarchy upon American institutions.

He believes other cities might well follow the example.

One member of the council refused to vote for the ordinance, characterizing Dale's resolution as "peanut politics which seeks to capitalize the stars and stripes."

His Age is Against Him.

"I am 52 years old and I have been troubled with kidneys and bladder for a good many years," writes Arthur Jones, Allen, Kan. "My age is against me to ever get cured, but Foley Kidney Pills do me more good than anything I ever tried." Many people suffer from kidney trouble who need not suffer when they can get Foley Kidney Pills. The Book of Job

Greek Homer, Italian Dante, English Shakespeare, and German Goethe are the world's greatest poets. Yet not one of them ever produced a work equal to the Book of Job. It is the culmination of all human thought, beyond which the mind of man cannot go. It is epic, it is lyric, it is dramatic. We dwell in a realm of the loftiest inspiration; "we are in the presence of forces above and beyond our present human understanding." We take part in a soul-searching discussion of the deepest problem of philosophy. We exhaust all solutions. We are present at the arbitrament of human existence itself. The judgment is final; there is no appeal.

The lore and wisdom of all the ages is in the Book of Job. It is logic; it is philosophy; it is reason; it is inspiration. Its theme is the Mystery of Human Suffering; without which there would be no human world, no need for laws, for government, for institutions. It presents five solutions of this wrinkled, world-old problem, the last of which answers the question of Man to his Maker.

The voice of God is heard in heaven and on the earth. He answers Job out of the whirlwind. His words are like unto peals of thunder in infinite space that die away amidst the awful majesty of the storm, whilst the lightnings dazzle with lurid splendor. And Job answers and says: "I have heard of Thee by the hearing of the ear; but now mine eye seeth Thee."

You cannot understand literature unless you know the Book of Job! It is the most-quoted work in the language. In Shakespeare's Hamlet, next to the books of the Bible the ofttest quoted piece of literature; there are 260 familiar quotations; in his Macbeth, the next in order, there are 156; but in the Book of Job there are 610 phrases, sentences, paragraphs, that have become so much a part and parcel of our speech, that every writer from Chaucer to Kipling, has appropriated and made them his own.

It will pay you richly to read the Book of Job again and again. Your vocabulary will be multiplied; your taste will be improved; your mind will gain in vigor and insight; and you will imbibe wisdom from its fountain-head.

Big Bird and Birdhouse Exhibit at Public Library Interests Thousands

In this, the merry spring time, when poets begin to wash dishes for a living and wanderlust settles down upon street car motorman, when milliners and milk dealers smile upon the world and young men pay four dollars for a pair of seats to John Drew without wincing—this is the time to set a bird house on the back porch roof and await the coming of "our feathered friends."

And to assist the public in understanding birdhouses and their makes and styles and varieties and requirements, the children's department of the Fort Wayne public library, has on display several hundred houses which it has collected from as many different sources.

If in all Allen county there is a bird couple who would not be satisfied with any of the houses in the exhibition, that same Mr. and Mrs. Bird are decidedly hard to please. There are burglar houses, and houses with ratty front porches. There are log cabins and adobe huts, Swiss chalets, Dutch domiciles, big houses and little houses, beautiful houses and houses a blind man wouldn't live in.

Some of them suggest the aesthetic designer, some seem to have hot and cold water, furnace, hardwood downstairs, and cement walks (why pay rent?) One seems for all the world like that house around the corner with the big front window and the gold fish and fern. All of which means simply that there are houses of a variety of kinds and conditions on display.

This is the third big bird house exhibit given by the children's department of the library, and it is attracting a great deal of attention all over the city. Whole classes are being brought almost daily from the schools, and the attendants in charge tell of the many designs and their uses.

In the center of the big room is a triumphal arch, or is it a pergola? At least it is a beautiful bit of design and is excellently constructed. All the work of the boys of the Fort Wayne vocational school. Lending against, suspended from, supported by and rested upon it are several dozen bird houses. Each has a small card telling of its kind and type, and there are so many that one may spend a profitable hour at the arch—or pergola—call it center piece, alone.

And the What-Nots.

Then in addition to the houses there are a great many other things that have to do with birds, bird life and bird protection. On the walls will be seen pictures of all the common birds of Indiana, and bird charts showing the families of birds, and charts showing the beneficial hawks and owls, valuable hawks and owls, valuable American game birds, and birds killed for their feathers. There are pictures of insect-eating birds that should be protected rather than scorned for their taste, all of the charts and many of the pictures sent to the library by the National association of Audubon societies of New York city.

Feeding devices from the shops of Charles E. White, of Kenilworth, Ill., are decidedly interesting. They are arranged that the dainties which cats and birds alike enjoy are so protected that cats may look but not taste and birds can get to them without any trouble at all. Then there are shelter shelves from the Meridian Bird club of Meridian, N. H., and one of which looks for all the world like a piece of fire apparatus. The Simplex Bird Apparatus

Co., of Demarest, also has some interesting bits of work on display.

Stockbridge Birds There.

Although the library already has one of the most comprehensive collections of bird books in the middle west, during this exhibit a large number of books have been brought here from the Com-

The Houses.

Among the exhibitors of houses are the following: Lansing Rustic Bird House Co., Lansing, Mich.; Maplewood Biological laboratory, Stamford, Conn.; Meriden Bird club, Meriden, N. H.; Farley and Loetscher, Dubuque, Ia.; Whipps-Wills Furniture Co., Scranton, Pa.; Joseph F. Dodson, Chicago; Packard Bird houses, Canton, O. Then in addition, there are a number of houses that were made by local boys in the public school and Fort Wayne high and manual training school. The Sharonware workshop of New York city loaned the only bird baths at the exhibit.

COST OF LIVING SOARS TO HIGHEST POINT IN HISTORY AS U. S. CITIZENS BIG AGAINST EUROPE FOR FOODSTUFFS.

This chart is based on official figures furnished by the United States bureau of labor statistics. It shows the fluctuations in retail prices by the month from January, 1912, to January, 1916. Before prices reached the index number of 106 in January, 1916, the highest point was 105 in September, 1914, as the chart indicates.

By Frederick M. Kerby.

Washington, D. C., April 8.—The people of the United States are trying to pull themselves up by their own bootstraps!

That is the only conclusion to be reached from examination of the latest figures on the rising cost of living!

The war abroad has started the greatest wave of prosperity the country has ever had; but, our manufacturers and exporters can get such big prices abroad, the people of this country are bidding against Europe for the foodstuffs of America.

Result: Cost of living is aeroplaning as never before.

The best indication of cost of living, naturally, is retail food prices. Only one agency in the United States compiles such figures—the United States bureau of labor statistics. The gathering of such statistics from all over the country is a big job, and the figures cannot be kept up to the minute.

But the bureau has just finished its compilation for the month of January, 1916. The result shows that the relative retail price of 26 of the principal articles of food used in workingman's tables in the United States was higher in January, 1916, than for any previous January since the compilation of such statistics began.

means of weighing and combining prices into a single unit of measurement) for these 26 articles has risen from 97 in January, 1912, to 106 in January, 1916.

Not only that, but the figure for January, 1916, touches the highest point of any month since 1912. The previous high point was in September, 1914. From that time there was a steady decline in food prices until March, 1915. At that time the effect of the foreign demand and the rising wages and increased manufacturing costs began to be felt. The retail price curves since March, 1915, has been climbing steadily from the index 96, up to 106 in January, 1916.

What has happened to food prices since January is familiar to every housewife. Butter that cost 35 cents in March a year ago is selling for 40 and 45 cents. Lard that was 12 cents a year ago is now 13 to 15 cents. Cream cheese has jumped to 22 and 25 cents, where a year ago, at the low point in food prices, it was 20 cents. Irish potatoes have gone up, in some sections as high as 20 cents a peck.

Sugar, that absolute necessity in every household, is up to 7 cents, where last year it was 5½. The prices, both wholesale and retail, of practically all meats, have risen considerably since last year and continue to rise.

While wholesale prices are perhaps not so good an indication of the cost of living as retail prices, in some respects their fluctuations serve as a more accurate guide. Retailers are loath to advance prices unless forced to do so by the constantly increasing wholesale price.

The corner grocer knows that he sells less when his groceries are exorbitantly high than when the prices are reasonable. For that reason he does not advance prices unless he is compelled to do so.

IN THE THEATERS

AT THE MAJESTIC.

Monday Evening—John Drew in "The Chief."
Tuesday Evening—Morning Musical in Popular Concert.

JOHN DREW HERE MONDAY IN HIS LATEST COMEDY

Theatrical folk come and go. The facetious one may say they principally go and with them the hope that they may not return. But John Drew, finished actor that he is, may always return and be welcome. Here is an actor who occupies a little niche in the public regard that is all his own. His plays are always pleasant, amiable, agreeable and "smart." They never give offense. The aristocrats of real life flock to Mr. Drew's plays to see themselves pictured on the stage and those of another social strata also flock to his plays to see just what the aristocrats of real life look like, knowing that they will be faithfully reproduced. Mr. Drew's admirers will, so it is said, enjoy his new comedy, "The Chief," in which he is to be seen at the Majestic next Monday evening. In New York where this modern play of life and manners has had a most pleasant run, it was said of the work that it was the best its star has had in a long time.

Horace Annesley Vachell is the author of "The Chief" and right at the outset one must commend him for writing a comedy of life in London at the present time that makes not the slightest mention of the war or its horrors. In the comedy Mr. Drew is an Earl and an ex-colonial governor known to his intimates in and out of the government service as the Chief. When the action opens the Earl is a widower and unhappily still has on his hands his departed wife's relations. And an irritating lot they are, or must be, to this cultured, amiable gentleman. There is one joy to him, however, and that is his ward, a precious miss that he looks after like a father. It appears that while at Malta the Earl was very much in love with a charming girl. Circumstances parted them and when they meet again both have lost their helpmates and the youthful widow is in such a financial condition that she seeks a position as secretary. Out of the goodness of his heart the Earl engages her. This brings about an interesting situation. The Earl's mother-in-law has been skillfully planning to effect a marriage between the Earl and her second daughter, who is the ostensible head of his household. It was his mother-in-law who separated the Earl and his first love and she sees the danger of allowing this woman in the Earl's house. She learns that the pearls that the young widow asked Yester to sell for her were false and there is also an incident dug up out of the past in which there figures a stolen banknote. Things look decidedly blue for Cynthia, the young widow. A scene that contains much strength comes in the third act where the young woman is accused by the mother-in-law of being a thief. And then comes the unexpected confession from the real thief, so you know all ends just as you would like to have it end.

In a Scene from His New Play, "Van Der Decken," Which He Will Present at the Majestic Next Thursday Evening.

The role of the Earl calls for all those qualities which Mr. Drew has in such abundance. In the supporting company are Laura Hope Crews, Thais Lawton, Consuelo Bailey, Katherine Stewart, George Graham and Vaughan Trevor.

David Warfield in New Play Coming Thursday.

At the Majestic theater on next Thursday evening David Warfield will present David Belasco in a legendary play of the sea, entitled "Van Der Decken." In bringing Mr. Warfield here at this time, Mr. Belasco is giving Fort Wayne theatergoers an opportunity of witnessing this great artist in his latest role before his appearance at the Belasco theater, New York. It had been the famous producer's original intention to take Mr. Warfield into New York immediately following the latter's Chicago engagement, but so instantaneous and emphatic has his appeal been in this newest piece that it is reasonably estimated he can remain in New York for an entire year. For this reason Mr. Belasco is discreetly reserving Mr. Warfield's appearance at his own playhouse until the beginning of next season.

In "Van Der Decken," Mr. Belasco has based his story upon the familiar legend of the Flying Dutchman, which tale in one form or another exists in almost every language. It relates of an enchanted ship which can never arrive in port and which from time immemorial has been sailing about at sea. Its captain is a Hollander who once swore that he would "make" the Cape of Good Hope in spite of a fearful storm though he should sail until the Day of Judgment. The evil one took him at his word and as a penalty for his blasphemy he is compelled to sweep the seas unceasingly, without being able to reach a haven. The appearance on the horizon of this spectre-ship is considered by sailors as ominous of disaster.

Mr. Belasco, however, has merely used the incident of the legend for his play, preferring to develop the story along entirely original lines. In "Van Der Decken" there are three acts and the time is 100 years ago. The first act shows "The Three Gulls" on the wharves of a North Sea port in Holland. Act two shows Van Der Decken's cabin on board the Batavia, and act three presents a cottage on the outskirts of Amsterdam, towards the close of a spring day.

As Van Der Decken it is reported that Mr. Warfield is fitted with another role which allows of a display of those superb dramatic gifts which have found their appeal and response in the hearts of all humanity. It is said to be a very picturesque role, totally unlike anything this noted artist has heretofore portrayed, but it is promised that a delightful surprise is in store for his many Fort Wayne admirers. Van Der Decken has already been pronounced as worthy in every way to be classed with those other famous portrayals of Van Barwig, Simon Levi and Peter Grimm.

In Mr. Warfield's support will be found a notable cast, including as it

MYSTERIOUS MRS. FAY

And Others Close Tonight at Palace—New Bill Coming.

Mrs. Eva Fay, the highly talented disciple of the East India Yogi, the mysterious woman whose delvings into the occult have caused Fort Wayne actually to marvel all week, closes her engagement with this evening's performance at the New Palace theater. All week she has been answering questions put to her by the curious and the distressed. Yesterday she held a private matinee for women only and the great theater was thronged with women who unbundled themselves to Mrs. Fay, and whose questions she read without possibly seeing them and answered by means of that mysterious reach into the fu-

AT THE TEMPLE.

MINSTREL SHOW MONDAY.

DeRue's Big Minstrels at the Temple, Matinee and Night.

Fort Wayne will have its first and only chance to see a minstrel show this season when DeRue's big singing and dancing show comes to the Temple theater Monday matinee and night. The first part is the usual singing show with all of the late song hits of the day, while the last part will introduce a number of vaudeville acts of the entertaining sort.

The Lancaster, O., Press of recent date has the following to say of DeRue Brothers' minstrels:

"DeRue's minstrels at the Sixth street theater Monday evening entertained a good-sized crowd, who thoroughly enjoyed the singing of a creditable quartet, the eccentric dancing of Bert Allen and a monologue by Billy DeRue. The comedy acrobats and Russian dancers were especially well received, and the ture and past with which she is high priestess.

On this same bill closing tonight are the Six Castillians, the wonder acrobats of the age; the Misses Leightner and Alexander, the Jolly Trio; Arthur Rigby, the blackface comedy man; The Koso Brothers, in a laughable club swinging and juggling act; and the premier harmonists, the Harmony Trio.

The Bison City Four coming. For the first half of the coming week Fort Wayne will welcome back home an old-time favorite, the Bison City Four, the singing quartet with the little tramp comedian, over whose antics Fort Wayne has laughed for several seasons. Santos and Hays, the girl with the funny figure and the original health hunter, Miss Santos is shaped like a dreadnaught and as amusing as the Ford peace ship. The Six Musical Spillers, ragtime devotees of brass and song; Gordon and Marx, the old-time German comedian characters, and the Flying Mayors, a team of trapeze artists who are completing their winter in vaudeville just prior to forsaking the footlights for the circus sawdust, also are on this bill. The real sensation of the bill is that famous serio-comedy sketch, "The Cop," a playlet that confounds the theory that all police are crooked. In "The Cop" a policeman is put to the acid test. He finally is stripped of his star and fired from the force, but clings to his honor and refuses to break before the forces that attempt to delude him. The denouement is startling. It's a play from the pages of life.

CHICAGO'S MILK WAR

IS PRACTICALLY ENDED

But One Big Distributor Hold Out on New Advance in the Price.

Chicago, April 3.—The milk war between producers in the Chicago district and the distributors in Chicago, which for the last few days has curtailed deliveries to consumers is practically at an end today. But one distributor, the Jordan Condensed Milk company, has not signed an agreement with the producers to buy milk at the new price of $1.55 per hundred pounds, an increase of 22 cents a hundred over the old price. Local officers of the company tentatively agreed to settle at the price demanded by the farmers but announced their action would have to be ratified by the directors of the company at New York before contracts are signed.

All of the distributors with the exception of one have announced that there will be no increase in the price of eight cents a quart which consumers now pay. Dealers say it is probable the full daily supply of between 1,500,000 and 1,750,000 quarts will be received today.

Assistant United States District Attorney Michael Igo announced he will start an investigation to determine whether either the Milk Producers' association or the distributors have violated the Sherman anti-trust law, as applied to inter-state commerce, by attempting to fix prices.

SMITH WILL NOT BE

NAMED CO-RESPONDENT

San Francisco, April 3.—Art Smith, the Fort Wayne birdseye, will not be named as co-respondent in the answer which William Caples, son of the late millionaire mayor of El Paso, will file to his wife's petition for divorce.

This announcement was made by Porter A. Ashe, attorney for Caples. "We will make a specific denial of all the charges in Mrs. Caples' suit but will not make any counter charges," he said. "We will deny her charges and ask the court to dismiss the suit."

When announcement was made some time ago that Smith would probably be named as co-respondent, Smith immediately declared his innocence and instructed his attorney to sue Caples for criminal libel in the event he carried out his threat.

BEGIN VOTING ON MONDAY.

Naval Building Program Before House Sub-Committee.

Washington, April 3.—The appropriations sub-committee of the house naval committee will begin voting Monday on the measure which carries the administration's five year naval building program. Chairman Baggett, of the committee, hopes to have the bill ready for the house by April 25. The sub-committee encountered delay in awaiting the completion of the printed record of the hearings, which lasted more than two months. It consists of more than 3,500 pages. Strong efforts will be made in the committee to increase the year's program.

A FLASH IN MOTION PICTURES

DEAR DAVE:
Well, Dave, I didn't stay out of work very long, did I? And it's just because you can't keep a good man down. When I got mad at J. J. Murphy, because he played that trick on me and had me bust into that picnic the way he did, I said I'd never go back to work for the Occidental Company again because it's kind of

"If you get that correspondence school stuff out of your head you'll be all right in two or three years."

A little company, and there ain't much of a chance to make big money with them.

But I went around to see Mr. Crossland, the head director, and told him about quitting, and he said:

"Well, whatever Murphy does is all right. He's running that end of it, and if he don't want you I can't do anything."

I told him I didn't want him to do anything. I asked Lucy what J. J. said about me, and she said that he said there was the making of a good comedy actor in me, and if I wasn't such a bonehead and didn't hate myself so much I wouldn't have lost my job.

I guess a lot of other companies would have made me an offer when they knewed I was at liberty, but then, what is the use of jumping around from one company to another, and if J. J. thought I was such a good actor as all that, I thought I'd go back to work for him, and I told him I was willing to come back, and he said:

"Well, Tom, if you'll get that correspondence school stuff out of your head you'll be all right in two or three years."

I said: "All right, I'll come back, because lots of people will want to see me in the pictures you are making. If they don't see me they won't like it, and then you may lose money, and I don't want anybody to lose money on me."

J. J. told Mrs. Strongheart that he knewed I'd ask for my job back. If he hadn't knowed that he wouldn't have let me go. He thinks he fired me, and if I just let him think it, Dave, it won't hurt him none, and I tell you acting in the movies at $50 a week is better than loading around, because there are about 500 actors and actresses out here looking for work and can't find it.

I got that $15 back that I paid that man that was going to get me a fortune out of them English courts because some of my people way back yonder had it coming to them. He came back and said he'd have to have some more money because the king of England was awfully hard up account of the war, and was making everybody in London and England pay more taxes, and if all of the Boggies in this country didn't give him some more money the king of England might sell that land for taxes before the lawsuit was settled.

I told him I wasn't working and couldn't pay him any more, and then Lucy's little sister, the one that got hurt from falling from a trapeze, came into the room, and he said:

"Where did that kid come from?"

I said that she was Mr. Maccollini's little girl, and he said he guessed he'd have to go. Just then Lucy came in. She said:

"Hello, Peterson, when did you quit preaching?"

He turned kind a pale and acted like he didn't know what she was talking about, and she said:

"Tom, is this the man you paid $15 to?"

I said "Yes," then she said to Peterson:

"Cough up with them $15, Peterson, this boy needs his money."

He tried to bluff her, but she said:

"Come across with that $15, or I'll tell the police about you taking that money from them people in San Francisco and promising to get them jobs as actors in the movies."

He gave up the money then, and said:

"You think you are smart," to Lucy. And I said: "You quit swearing at a lady," and he said, "You make me."

I said:

"All right, I can go that, too," and I kinda throwed him out. When he got up some papers dropped out of his pocket, and I said: "Do you want some more?" but he ran off down the street and left his papers.

I looked at them, and he had one of Mabel's pictures, too. What do you think of that, Dave? That fellow on the stage coach had one and now this grafter had one.

I showed Lucy the picture and she said:

I said: "This is one of them."

And she said: "Oh, my, there's two of them. Which one do you like the best?"

I said: "There ain't no difference except that she's got her hair fixed a little different in this picture, and the other one makes her eyes kinda pop out."

Lucy says: "Tom, I sometimes think J. J. is right about calling you a bonehead," but she was laughing when she said that, and I know she didn't mean it. But I tell you, Dave, that Lucy is no bonehead. She sure is smart. You ought to have heard her tell a woman where she got off at that come to the studio the other day.

This woman is a reformer that is writing a book about how movies are made. J. J. Murphy was polite to her and showed her all around and explained everything about the movies to her, and said "Yes, ma'am" and "No, ma'am" to her all the time, and was just as nice as a basket of chips—till she got to asking him some questions he didn't like.

She wanted to know if a lot of the movie girls wasn't bad girls, and then J. J. got mad.

"Where did you get that stuff?" he said.

The woman said: "I've heard this on good authority."

J. J. said: "Well, if you've got that kind of ideas there is no use in talking to you. You'd better go back and listen to your authority, you won't find any of that stuff here. I know the kind of a woman you are: you'll go away and write them things in your book, no matter if I do deny them."

She asked him if she could talk to the girls, and he said: "Go ahead, it will do you good." But none of the girls didn't want to talk to her but Lucy and the little red-headed girl that acted with me in the wild-man picture where I got chased by the lions.

Lucy said: "See here, madam, what do you want to know? I'll answer your questions."

And the woman got out her specks and put them on, and got a book to write in. She was an ugly woman and had a long nose and looked like she didn't ever get enough to eat and had never had no good times in her life. She asked Lucy if she thought there was a bad moral atmosphere to acting in the movies, and Lucy said: "In other words, you are asking me and all of us girls here if we are straight?"

The woman didn't say nothing, only she wrote what Lucy said in her book.

Lucy said: "Madam, I may not be able to talk to you in any high-brow manner, but there are a lot of things I'd like to get off my system. I know the show business all up and down the line, and there is no more badness among show people than any other class of people."

JACKIE SAUNDERS is one of the newest, and at the same time one of the brightest stars to appear in the moving picture sky. She flashed into prominence a few months ago, and ever since has been sending out sparks in the shape of favorable criticism on her work. Enthusiastic friends of Miss Saunders have called her the Maude Adams of the movies, and while she has not had time to win as large a following in the pictures as Miss Adams has on the regular stage, there is much about the little star, when ability and charm of manner is taken into consideration, to make the similarity fitting.

Miss Saunders has that mysterious element which we call personality for want of a better name, in a large degree, and on top of this she has ability and is not afraid of the most tire-some work, the longest hours, or anything that will tend to advance her in her art.

She was born in Philadelphia, and has done a great deal as a citizen of that city to disprove the assertion that its citizens are slow and sleepy. She is of French and German parentage, and says that she is strictly neutral.

Miss Saunders made her first stage appearance when a child in a company of dancing dolls. After that engagement she was taken on the stage and went to school for a long time. When she came out of the convent she took up stage work again in a stock company in her native town, and when she got her feet pretty firmly fixed on the slippery boards of the regular stage, along came the movies.

Miss Saunders, like many of the ambitious young players of that day, saw the opportunities of the new art, and abandoned the speaking for the silent stage.

She made rapid progress from the very first. When she first went to work at the Balboa studios, her fellow-performers used to say: "Keep your eye on Jackie Saunders, she is going to arrive some day," and to judge from the favorable comments her work is receiving of late, she has about reached her destination.

Miss Saunders, like many of the ambitious most democratic of players. There is nothing 'up stage' about her. She meets everybody, from the lowly extra to the high and mighty big-salaries star, with the same manner that is one of her principal charms.

She plays any part in the cast with equal ease, but says she likes "harum scarum," tom-boy parts best of all.

worked outside of the movies where somebody didn't try to make me forget some of the things my mother taught me, and that was once when I worked in a Chinese laundry."

Then the woman said: "But there is so much kissing and things like that in moving pictures that isn't moral; think of the temptation."

Lucy said: "Madam, did anybody ever kiss you when other people were looking?" and the woman said: "Mercy me, no!"

Lucy said: "Well, then, you can't understand. But if you was to get kissed in a movie play with ten or fifteen people standing around looking on, and electric lights as bright as 40,000 candles burning all at once shining on you, you wouldn't think there was anything bad in it, or any more temptation than shaking hands."

But I don't think anybody would want to kiss

the publishers, and have them made into scenery form in the studio, because they know just what they want, what kind of actors they have and all about it—something you cannot know.

Your question, "Is it hard to get into photoplaying?" can be answered in one word. Yes, it is very hard to get a place in any of the studios, unless you have had experience, and even then you might have to wait a long time and play extra parts in many plays before you can make any headway.

All of the studios have long waiting lists of people who have had experience on the regular stage. Of course, there is always room for exceptional ability, the same as in any calling. It is not absolutely necessary that you be able to ride and swim, but the ability to do these things help. To be able to act is the prime requisite. If you can do that and get a chance to show that you can do it, the other things would not matter, and you might get a place, providing, always, that there was a vacancy. But since there are many regular stage players and many regular moving-picture players who would like to get work and cannot, the chances are not very good. Do not pay money to any one claiming to have influence or to be able to get you in.

L. WANTS to know how deeply into detail she must go in writing a play. Plays require more detail at some points than at others, and only the writer can judge this. Make the story plain. If John passes through a room merely to get to the street, little detail is needed, but if he sees a picture on the wall in passing that makes him think of a girl he loved in the long ago, you must have John stop and look at the picture, and perhaps have a vision of the girl, and a lot of detail would be necessary. Or he may be on his way to lunch, and he takes a picture of a girl out of his pocket and compares it with the one on the wall; there is detail of a different character.

You will have to use your own judgment. You have the story; your mind evolves situations and actions that the characters go through to develop the story; go into detail to as great a length as is necessary to make the story clear and convincing. Where you can handle a scene with little detail, do so; there is nothing that will win you favor in the studio so quickly as to make your work professional in these points.

M. S. H.—If you write a play and use the plot from a story you have read in a book or magazine, you must get the author's and the publisher's consent, unless it is a story on which the copyright has expired, or a story that has never been copyrighted. You cannot change it around and use it as long as the plot in the story is the property of the first writer. There is very little chance of selling plays made from magazine stories.

Writers must think up their own plots. If they cannot do this, they are not writers. Magazine stories are used for pictures, but the producers prefer to make arrangements with is the best chaparron. Good girls don't need them."

The woman said: "But you girls are all too wise, you shouldn't know the meaning of bad things."

And Lucy said: "But you seem to know a good deal about it," and the woman was kinda stumped at that and said she had read all about it in books.

Lucy said that when her mother was alive she wouldn't let her read books of that kind, and the woman said she'd have to go now. J. J. said: "Come back next week. Mr. Boggie, that tall and handsome young gentleman, is going to work in a film where he has to kiss two or three girls." And she said she would like to see some movies made, and then she went away.

J. J. said: "Now she'll go and write a piece about the awful lives movie actors live."

I never heard anything about me working in a play where I'd have to kiss a lot of girls. I guess J. J. was just fooling, but if he wants me to do it I will, because you have to do what ever they want you to in the movies. Dave, no matter whether it's jumping into the Pacific Ocean, riding a camel or kissing a girl.

Well, so long, Dave. You did out about me finding all them pictures of Mabel and let me know right away.

TOM.

Lucy said: "Common sense and a decent mind

worked outside of the movies where somebody didn't try to make me forget some of the things my mother taught me, and that was once when I worked in a Chinese laundry."

Then the woman said: "But there is so much kissing and things like that in moving pictures that isn't moral; think of the temptation."

Lucy said: "Madam, did anybody ever kiss you when other people were looking?" and the woman said: "Mercy me, no!"

Lucy said: "Well, then, you can't understand. But if you was to get kissed in a movie play with ten or fifteen people standing around looking on, and electric lights as bright as 40,000 candles burning all at once shining on you, you wouldn't think there was anything bad in it, or any more temptation than shaking hands."

But I don't think anybody would want to kiss

the publishers, and have them made into scenery form in the studio, because they know just what they want, what kind of actors they have and all about it—something you cannot know.

Your question, "Is it hard to get into photoplaying?" can be answered in one word. Yes, it is very hard to get a place in any of the studios, unless you have had experience, and even then you might have to wait a long time and play extra parts in many plays before you can make any headway.

All of the studios have long waiting lists of people who have had experience on the regular stage. Of course, there is always room for exceptional ability, the same as in any calling. It is not absolutely necessary that you be able to ride and swim, but the ability to do these things help. To be able to act is the prime requisite. If you can do that and get a chance to show that you can do it, the other things would not matter, and you might get a place, providing, always, that there was a vacancy. But since there are many regular stage players and many regular moving-picture players who would like to get work and cannot, the chances are not very good. Do not pay money to any one claiming to have influence or to be able to get you in.

L. WANTS to know how deeply into detail she must go in writing a play. Plays require more detail at some points than at others, and only the writer can judge this. Make the story plain. If John passes through a room merely to get to the street, little detail is needed, but if he sees a picture on the wall in passing that makes him think of a girl he loved in the long ago, you must have John stop and look at the picture, and perhaps have a vision of the girl, and a lot of detail would be necessary. Or he may be on his way to lunch, and he takes a picture of a girl out of his pocket and compares it with the one on the wall; there is detail of a different character.

You will have to use your own judgment. You have the story; your mind evolves situations and actions that the characters go through to develop the story; go into detail to as great a length as is necessary to make the story clear and convincing. Where you can handle a scene with little detail, do so; there is nothing that will win you favor in the studio so quickly as to make your work professional in these points.

Pennsylvania Railroad Was Organized in April, 1846.

A statement issued from the Pennsylvania general offices and bearing the signature of Samuel Rea, president of the company, reads as follows:
"The Pennsylvania railroad is seventy years old this month. Its charter was granted April 13, 1846. For what our railroad represents after these seventy years credit belongs:
"First, to our stockholders, whose capital made possible the development of this railroad.
"Second, to those directors, officers and employees who have gone before and to the 250,000 of us who are now working to make this railroad better every day.
"Third, to a helpful and reasonable public.
"In these seventy years we have learned much. Above all, we know that the future prosperity of our company depends upon the continued confidence, cooperation and good will of the people it serves."

NEED MACHINISTS BADLY.
W. C. Kaiser, superintendent of the Western Gas works, is greatly handicapped in shop work by the lack of machinists. "We need eight or ten machinists at present," he said, "but I don't know where to get them." Several of the lathes, planers, shapers and other machines in the big shop are idle because there are no competent men available to operate them. The Western Gas works is well supplied with orders and if the men were available would be running to full capacity of the plant.

John T. Allen, of the east department of the Pennsylvania shops, received a letter from his son, Floyd A. Allen, in which the young man states that he is now located in New Brunswick, N. J., where he has an excellent position in the pattern shop of the Simplex Auto company. Floyd worked a number of years in the Pennsylvania pattern shop, where he learned his trade. Last fall he resigned and went to Detroit, where he worked in an automobile shop until last week, when he went to New Brunswick.

Machinist Charles T. Shoup, who took a leave of absence about a year ago and went to Florida to develop some land he purchased in the Palm Beach territory, returned here last week and next Monday he will take employment at his trade in the Pennsylvania erecting shop. He still holds his real estate in Florida and expects to return there some day.

AUTOMOBILE TRANSMISSION AND SOME OF THE MEN WHO WILL BUILD 800 OF THEM AT THE GENERAL ELECTRIC WORKS ON BROADWAY.

A new product at the Fort Wayne factory of the General Electric company and one which is contributing greatly to the business of the plant in the testing room yesterday and the accompanying picture illustrates it and some of the men who are interested in the work of building the transmissions. Setting on the pedestal on which it was placed to allow free access to all its parts, gives it a bulky appearance, altogether absent in the machine attached to the automobile engine ready for service. This machine replaces the engine fly wheel, the gear transmission, lighting generator and starting motor and it is built in two sizes, for a five passenger and for a seven passenger car. The personnel of the group of men at the side and back of the transmission is as follows: Seated on the truck, reading left to right: Earl Orniston and Lawrence Becker. Standing in the rear, left to right, Bery C. Evans, Gus Kayser, A. F. Schaeferacker, William Welers, Enno W. Lankenan, G. F. Rozze, Harry Beers, Frank Wabun, E. L. Jaffner, W. H. Orlington, H. C. MANY HEAR LECTURE ON KNIGHT MOTOR

Instructive Address is Delivered Before Large Audience at Majestic.

Before an audience that filled the Majestic theater, Henry H. Bower, S. A. E., delivered a most interesting and instructive lecture Friday evening on the Knight motor.

The lecture was illustrated and owners of automobiles were given much valuable information. The speaker was introduced by Attorney W. H. Stambaugh.

Mr. Bower is regarded as one of the best authorities in the country on the Knight motor and in his address he explained in detail the operation of two distinct types of motor, portraying their respective principles on the screen.

The positive action of the sleeve valves, opened and closed by connecting rods, was clearly shown by means of the moving pictures.

Positive valve action, the speaker explained, was the object of all motor car designers, who seek to eliminate the use of such uncertain factors as cams and springs, by means of which the valves of other types of motors are opened and closed.

It was explained also how the sleeve valves provide the ideal spherically-shaped combustion chamber, acknowledged by all engineers to be the type of combustion chamber that provides the most powerful motor.

Twenty dealers and salesmen of the Fort Wayne Overland company, from towns throughout northern Indiana and western Ohio, were here to attend the lecture and were tendered a banquet at the Anthony. Distinguished guests were William Northrup and F. E. Lee, of the great Willys-Overland organization.

All horseshoeing shops in county will be closed Tuesday, April 11, 1916.

Powerful Stream of Water 30 Feet Below Surface at Orleans.

Orleans, Ind., April 8.—Drillers engaged in sinking wells for the new water works system, struck a powerful stream of water at a depth of 30 feet. It is believed the men drilled into a branch of the historic river or an underground cavern. The roar of the flowing water can be plainly heard for some distance, and despite the fact it is only a hundred feet from another well which is 113 feet deep and through solid rock, the water appears to be of the same quality and flavor as in the deep well.

MERCHANTS OPPOSED TO PROGRAM ADVERTISING

The question of advertising in programs will be taken up Monday evening at the regular monthly meeting of the Fort Wayne Retail Merchants' association at the Commercial club, to which both members and non-members are invited.

In a letter sent out by the entertainment committee to the various members, the following comment is made: "Since our last monthly meeting, a couple of strangers came to town and pulled off an entertainment, issued a program, sold tickets, cleaned up a lot of money, left the city, threw a kiss from the rear platform, no doubt, sized us up as a lot of 'Rip Van Winkles'."

"Therefore, let us 'wake up' and prepare ourselves against these 'sleeve-tongued' professional merchant workers with a pair of brass knuckles or the big stick."

A careful estimate has been made of the money spent in program ads in Fort Wayne and it amounts to $75,000 to $100,000 a year. Three-fourths of this is an absolute waste and some action will be taken Monday evening to curb this awful loss."

LESTER PUTS IN A RIGHT BUSY NIGHT

Two Robberies Net Him in All Nothing But Outlook of Gloom.

Frank Lester, a youth who arrived in Fort Wayne Thursday, was put in motion long, but he had speed while he was going. He got a job at Liebenuth's West Main street restaurant, worked a day, went back at night and burglarized the cook shop, stealing the pipe and tobacco pouch of the chef and then in his own room, which he shared with John Miller, stole a 30-cent pocket-knife from his bunkie. He was arrested and charged with petit larceny. He pleaded guilty to the robbery at Liebenuth's offering in extenuation that his employer had taken from his wages the price of a night's lodging and he thought he'd burgle a bit just to get even. The prisoner's guilty plea, the positive testimony of Liebenuth and Miller's minutely detailed narrative, delivered with candor and impressiveness, conspired to set up a complicated and puzzling problem of justice that the court was not prepared off-hand to unravel, so it was taken under advisement until next Tuesday.

Some More Unfinished Business.
Under the order of unfinished business the city court next Tuesday will hand down a decision in the case of Louis J. Geiss, proprietor of the Ophir Coal company, who was charged with delivering short weight of coal to Frank Johnson, 421 East Creighton avenue. It was proved beyond doubt and cavil that the wagon driver for Geiss had got mixed in his orders, delivering a half-ton intended for Johnson to John Evers, 2534 Maumee avenue, and Evers' quarter-ton load to Johnson. The Johnson shortage was reported to City Sealer C. B. Tolman, who weighed the Johnson consignment, found it almost 50 per cent short and filed an affidavit. The testimony was clear that merely a mistake had been made and Mr. Geiss knew nothing of it until he was ordered to report at the city court.

Fined for Selling Diseased Horse.
Helbert Stewart was found guilty of selling to William T. Hall a horse afflicted with heaves and known at the time to the seller to be diseased. He was fined $10 and costs. Helbert Stewart.

Other City Court Cases.
Ed Ryan, John Clifford and John Murphy, vagrants, were fined $5 and costs and went to jail. Ryan, known here as Riley, and Clifford, have a record here for former appearances on more serious charges.

Tim Moore and Howard Dilworth, drunks, drew $5 and costs each and went to jail for fifteen days. John Bennett and Dick Brennan, two other drunks, were continued under bond until next week.

James Delaney and George Wilson, bootleggers, were held under bond until Monday.

The case of Fred Lepper, charged with arson for attempting to set fire to the home of Mrs. Dysart, one night last week, was continued until April 12 and his bond remains at $500.

YOUNG MAN IS MISSING.
Kenneth Ewers, 17-year-old son of John Ewers, a grocer at 2534 Maumee avenue, has been missing from home since Thursday morning at 6:30 o'clock, when he left home with his lunch ostensibly to go to his work in the Bass Foundry and Machine works. Nothing has been heard from him since that time and the police have been asked to make inquiry for the young man.

When Mary "Blew the Tank"

Indiana has a Tipton. Tipton has a high school. The high school has a pupil named Mary. Mary has big blue eyes. The eyes have long lashes. The lashes curl dreamily—too dreamily for the peace of youthful minds in Tipton's hall of learning.

Furthermore—
Tipton has an opera-house, and, of course, has a stage. The stage has often creaked to the patter of dancing feet. The dancing feet have often inspired visions in the mind of Mary—visions of a pretty apartment, a maid and a limousine all her very own.

And still further—
Tipton has an auto-shop. The auto-shop has a manager. The manager had the love of Mary. Mary had not the love of the auto manager—the one fellow in town who refused to be swayed, chained and hypnotized by the soulful orbs and curly lashes of this fair Hoosier maid.

Above in primer diction, you have the three reasons why Mary Irene Reagan, just 17 years old, ran away from home, or, as she says, "blew the tank." To be more specific: First, because the high school teachers insisted that she make her eyes behave; second, because she fancied the life of a Dolly Dimples, a Bessie Ballet, or a Fannie Footlights; third, in believing that "absence makes the heart grow fonder," she thought the auto manager would follow her, bring her back, marry her—and together they'd live happily ever after.

SHE LOVED ALL IN VAIN.

The reason was by far the most important. If Bernard Bradley, the young distributor of gas wagons, had even so much as taken Mary for a ride around the block, given her the least bit of encouragement, she would have snapped her slender fingers at the teachers—yes, and awakened from the dream of seeing her name flashed by glaring bulbs along Gotham's Great White Way or Chicago's Rialto. But Bernard Bradley did not take her for a spin, nor toot a horn in flirtatious mood—and yet something told Mary that he loved her. She would run away with another youth to whet his jealousy. If Bradley did a Gabriel act, following his village Evangeline, well and good. If he did not—then for a box of make-up, a can of cold cream and a star's dressing-room.

Bradley did not! So Mary sent the "other youth" back home and waited for a Flo Ziegfeld or a Schubert to do the rest. But the police beat Flo and Lee to discovering the whereabouts of Mary, and—well, let the girl tell you the whole story just as she told it to me sitting in the cozy living-room of her parents' home in Tipton.

"Gee, but I had a swell time in Chicago," said Mary. "And you can bet that I'm going back there some day—'cause I don't love Bernard any more, and I'm tired of bein' a Sis Hopkins in this tank town. That's what they call Tipton up there in Chicago—a tank town."

"I wasn't gettin' along very well at school, the teachers bein' right angry at me for flirtin' with the boys."

PREPARES TO RUN AWAY.

"There wasn't a lad in the school I'd have given a glass of cider to call my steady beau—no, not one. I just was foolin' all of them. The fellow I really liked was Bernard Bradley. He keeps an auto-shop downtown, across the street from the telephone office. But Bernard didn't show any symptoms of bein' head-over-heels crazy about me, though I thought he was bashful and loved me in his quiet sort of way."

"When the teachers began to make an awful fuss about my winkin' and blinkin' at the boys I made up my mind to run away. I had only a few dollars of my own—and folks can't travel without money. So I sent word to Ray Huntsinger over in Elwood that I was 'ready to blow the tank,' as they say up in Chicago. Ray had always been kind of mushy on me, and of course he thought I meant that we should elope. And that was just what I wanted Ray to think. He's workin' all the time and has money."

"You see, I thought that if Bernard really loved me he'd follow us and take me away from Ray before a minister could hitch us up. And if he didn't—well, I'd shake Ray and get a job on the stage. I'm as pretty as some of the actresses that come to Tipton, and what was the use wastin' eyes on a lot of high school boys

"Next day I told some folks I was goin' to run away with Ray, just so as Bernard would hear about it. Then I packed an old shoe box full of things, and, puttin' on my best dress and hat, went to meet Ray at the traction station. He was givin' happy over havin' taken me from all the other fellows—and he bought me popcorn and candy and lots of goodies on the way to Indianapolis."

"We got there that same day and then left for Chicago. Our goin' to Indianapolis first was to throw my folks off the track. Word got to Bernard, though, just as I wanted it to, that we were headin' for Chicago. My idea was to give him time to get there before us and steal me away from Ray when we arrived in the depot."

"But no Bernard was there to meet us, and it made me feel like 2 cents. Ray was insistin' on gettin' married right away—but I said it was late and we couldn't get a license. So we went to a hotel near the depot. They gave Ray a pen and told him to sign his name in a big book. He signed 'Ray Havens, Indianapolis.' And then they gave me the pen. I saw Ray hadn't written his right name, so I wrote 'Mary Baker, Kokomo.' The clerk smiled and showed us to separate rooms."

"In the mornin' I met Ray and he was all dolled up to get married. 'Oh, we can get married when there's nothin' else to do,' I said. 'Let's go and get somethin' to eat.' Ray acted kind of blue, but it didn't affect my stairs and got into a car. And we rode clean to the end of the line and back. Why, the tracks were higher from the ground than the bank building in Tipton."

"Next we went to the river and saw the bridges go up to let the boats through. Then I asked Ray to take me to a show. 'Get seats in the front row,' I said. 'I won't,' said Ray, 'cause you want to flirt with the actors.' Gee, but Ray was gettin' wise all at once. That's just what I wanted to do. Every fellow in Chicago looked good to me—even better than Bernard. I was beginnin' to forget all about him. Fact is, he and his automobiles went flyin' out of my mind altogether when Ray took me to a cabaret after the show. This was the life—no more Tipton for mine."

"The next day I told Ray he'd better go back home. 'This is a pretty fast town—too fast for you, Ray,' I said. 'You've got a good job and you'd better stick to it. I couldn't marry you and live down in Indiana after seein' Chicago. Maybe some day I'll get tired of it all and go back—but not now.'

LADY BARBERS! CAN YOU BEAT IT?

"Ray felt awful bad, but said he was willin' to wait. So he paid my hotel rent for a month and gave me a little spendin' money. Then he left for Tipton."

"The day after Ray went away I began to plan goin' on the stage."

Such a smile, such a smile! No wonder Mary Reagan is waiting for Flo Ziegfeld to come along and kidnap her from Tipton! And, gee, but she had a "swell time" in the big, big city!

couldn't forget that face on a bet. Look, it's the same one that's in this paper."

"He held up a copy of an Indianapolis paper. My picture was on the front page, and over it was printed: 'Runaway Girl of 17 for Whom the Police Are Looking.' I tried to take the paper from him, but he handed it to the detective. 'Well, girlie, the game is up,' said the detective. 'Back to Tipton for yours. You're not of age.' His voice had changed so. I began to cry. 'Can the weep stuff,' he said. And then he turned me over to a lady who wore a star and she took me to the police station. That's the last I saw of the man whom I loved more than all others put together."

"There ain't much more to tell. The next day the Tipton chief of police came after me—and here I am." Mary rose.

"Just wait until I'm 18!" she said. "I'll shake the dust of this tank town and go back to Chicago. And then watch me get even with that detective."

Baseball Fans.

"Dear me!" remarked the perspiring old lady who was making her first visit to a baseball game. "I don't see how people can tell such terrible fibs."

"What now, auntie?" asked the city niece, in surprise.

"Why, the paper stated that there were thousands of 'fans' out here every afternoon and I am suffering with the heat and can't find one."

Great Force.

"So your latest play has a cyclone, eh?" said the dramatic critic. "Is it realistic?"

"Well, I should say it is," replied the manager, proudly. "Why, when we gave a performance out in Kansas the cyclone looked so natural half of the audience ran down under the orchestra pit, thinking it was a cyclone cellar."

tellin' me to come back to the depot the next day. I hurried away, my heart flutterin' like a pump handle. I didn't even wait to see the man who was goin' to give me a job on the stage. I had forgotten him as I had forgotten about the son of Cuba's mayor and Bernard. You see, I had just lost my heart to this handsome, brave policeman."

"I went back to see him the next mornin' and blushed all over when he shook my hand. He had a partner with him this time—a fellow with a little mustache. They call it a 'misplaced eyebrow' in Chicago. I didn't like the partner, 'cause he kept askin' me too many questions. When the nice detective—the first one I met, you know—asked me to lunch I told him I'd go if he wouldn't bring the other fellow along. He promised not to. We had lunch together and then went to a matinee. After the show he sent me back to the hotel, makin' me promise not to talk with any strange men."

Mary sighed.

"Gee, but I was a happy kid. And then a newsboy had to go and spoil it all."

"When Ray and I was comin' from Indianapolis to Chicago the newsboy on the train kept tryin' to flirt with me. Heaven knows, I like to flirt—but not with a newsboy. I told him he was fresh, and Ray said he'd give him a good thrashing if he didn't behave."

"Well, a couple of days after I had met the detective I was talkin' to him in the depot when that same newsboy came walkin' toward us. He seemed to know the detective, 'cause he called him by his first name. 'Hello, kid,' he said to me. 'Don't remember me, do you?' I was mad. 'I should say I don't,' I said. 'Well, I remember you,' he said. 'I down beside me. 'Sorry I have to go to Canada,' he said, 'but when I come back I'm going to show you the town. I like you. Believe me, you're some kid.' I asked him who he was and he said his father was the mayor of Cuba. And I, silly goose, had always thought that Cuba had a president!"

"While we were talkin' a handsome gentleman walked over to us. 'Do you know this girl?' he asked my friend. 'Why—er—certainly,' replied the other. 'Don't I?' turnin' to me. 'Sure,' I said. 'I met him more than ten minutes ago.' At that the handsome stranger threw back his coat, showin' a big star. 'Beat it!' he said to the man who was with me. Then he sat down."

"Do you live in Chicago?" he asked. 'Yes,' I said. 'Where did you come from?' 'Down in Indiana.' 'Folks know you're here?' 'Sure.' 'How old are you?' 'Eighteen.'

LOST HER HEART TO A COP.

"He kept on questionin' me—tryin' to find out if I was tellin' the truth about my age and about my folks knowin' where I was. But I stuck to what I first told him, 'cause I knew he was a detective and could send me back to Tipton."

"He promised to help me get a job."

Lady barbers! Gee, what would Tipton say to that!

"I was goin' out of the hotel, bound for the lady barbers, when a swell lookin' fellow met me. He lifted his hat and smiled. Oh, how he could smile! He followed me outside. 'Beg pardon,' he said, 'but didn't you used to be in the chorus of a Chicago show?' I was flattered. This man thought I was good lookin' enough to be a chorus girl. 'No, sir,' I said. 'But I hope to be in a show soon. You see, I've only been in Chicago a few days. My home's in Tipton, Ind.' The man laughed right out loud. 'Some tank!' he said. And then he whispered: 'I'm a theatrical manager, and I'm goin' to make you a star. You're the prettiest girl I've ever seen.' I was so happy I could have cried. 'Meet me at the Dearborn street depot at 2 o'clock this afternoon and we'll talk things over,' said the man."

"HAVEN'T I MET YOU BEFORE?"

"I was there before 2 o'clock waitin' for him, when a different fellow—gee, he was swell lookin', too—walked up to me and lifted his hat. 'Haven't I met you before?' he asked. 'No, you haven't,' I said. 'Then it was another pretty girl who looked just like you,' he said. And he sat appetite any. After eating a stack of wheat cakes and some sausages I was ready to take in the sights. Who wouldn't be, never having seen a big city before?

"Walkin' along one of the streets in the loop, I heard a rumblin' noise and saw a lot of cars runnin' on a track way over my head. 'Gee, it must be great ridin' up there,' I said to Ray. 'Let's try it.' Ray didn't want to. 'Let's get married,' he said. 'Not just now,' I said. 'Let's ride first.' And so we climbed some Mary's chic street attire. She looked so much at home in the big town that it was days before anybody suspected she was a runaway girl.

Once I read that when Mrs. Vernon Castle had her hair bobbed she set the fashion among actresses. I supposed that I would get a position quicker if I had mine cut off. I asked the hotel clerk who would do it for me. 'You'll find lady barbers a half block up the street,' he said."

SHOWER FOR BRIDE-TO-BE

BY LUCILLE DAUDET.

A NOVEL idea for a linen shower can be executed in the following way: Invite the bride-to-be to spend an evening at your home with a few old friends. See that she arrives the first, and is comfortably seated and chatting with the other guests before the bride arrives. Of course, the latter are in the secret, otherwise there would be no shower.

Each guest must come in carrying an umbrella. The bride may not notice the first one, but she will certainly remark before long that every one who enters carries an umbrella. She will probably ask before the last one arrives if it is raining, in which case the guest questioned should answer: "No, but it looks like a shower."

When all the guests have arrived each one must gain possession of her own umbrella in case it has been laid aside on her entrance. At a given signal, which should be some such remark from the hostess as "Did you say it looked like a shower?" the guests should all open their umbrellas with the answer, "It certainly does."

From the steel ribs of each umbrella should be suspended by a string the parcel holding the piece of linen which the guest intends to give the bride. Any big bundles like a tablecloth will make the umbrella a bit bulky when closed, but in such a case the guest will have to smuggle her umbrella in unnoticed. But most linen pieces can be done up in such small parcels that they can easily be concealed in a closed umbrella.

At the signal to open, the parcels will all hang down by their strings. The guests then hold their umbrellas over the bride-to-be's head. The hostess provides her with scissors to cut down her various bundles and the point of the shower is made apparent.

For such a shower it might be wise if the biggest pieces were kept for presentation at the refreshment table. One of those great big square umbrellas should be suspended over the table and the hostess's own gift should be suspended from that.

WHEN YOU GO A TRAVELING

NEW COAT FOR BABY

THE children do not lack pretty frocks and comfortable fashions in these modern days; indeed, their wardrobes are stocked with many very practical possessions that claim a notice.

A little perambulator coat idea is worth a word or two. It has a few snug fasteners in front that enable a muff to be contrived at a moment's notice. Made of the front breadth of the coat by turning the hem under, this cozy place for little cold hands is well appreciated, and as the perambulator cover hides the muff the simple contrivance is not noticeable. To make the muff possible one front side seam of the coat is left loose for a few inches above the hem; the other is naturally free.

A little set of baby comforts given to a lucky child includes a pair of woolen gloves and a perambulator cover to match. The gloves are white with pink gauntlets, and the cover white with a pink lining and turned-back hem.

The turned-back hem has a receptacle in which the gloves may be stowed away ready for Miss Baby to find when she takes her drive.

MILADY'S BEAUTY

CRACKS at the corners of the mouth, a most painful condition, are frequently caused by acid in the stomach. These cases may be treated by applying bicarbonate of soda full strength and dry, there being enough moisture on the surface to make it hold. This is done at night.

DULLNESS of the eye is due to a relaxed state of the eye coats. It always points to a weak condition of the nervous system, which in turn may have been caused by sleeplessness, worry, etc. Necessarily, whatever benefits the health will help to remedy this state of the eye. As a broad rule, a good tonic will make the nervous system brighter, and as a result will also brighten the eyes.

A FEW suggestions regarding the habitual sleeping position is sometimes of benefit to those who have thin undeveloped necks and hollow chests, or, worse still, incline toward weak lungs and pulmonary troubles. Many people cannot sleep comfortably without one or two pillows beneath the head, thus causing a forward inclination of the shoulders and a consequent contracting of the lung capacity, causing difficult respiration. There is also a considerable amount of unused space in the lower part of the lungs. It is also a frequent cause of round shoulders and an occasional curvature of the spine, and is both unsightly and unhealthy in its effects. A small pillow is all that should be used at any time and none at all is better. No amount of cure or massage can correct such a condition, brought about in so unnecessary a manner.

MUTTON tallow is still considered by many persons as the best remedy for chapped lips and hands, despite the vogue of many more pretentious ointments and other preparations. To render the best service mutton tallow must be properly prepared. Get the mutton tallow, wash it carefully and place it in a pan with some water. Let it cook slowly in the oven, adding a pinch of alum to keep the melted fat from becoming rancid. When the tallow is ready to be poured into a jar strain it through a double thickness of cheese cloth. Any desired perfume may be added and sometimes a stick of cinnamon is put in the grease. It is in the oven. For those who do not care for the plain tallow white wax in equal proportions is melted with it.

A PRETTY girl, noted for the glistening whiteness of her teeth, has an odd dentifrice which she uses in spring and summer when prices are not prohibitive. She crushes fresh strawberries on her toothbrush and uses them as a dentifrice. The slight acidity in the berry has a whitening tendency and as she rinses her mouth well afterward it seems to have no injurious effect on the enamel.

TO give grace to the waist and lower part of the trunk: Lie at full length on the back. Flex the legs, and, resting solely on the heels and shoulders, raise the body from the mattress without the aid of the hands. Extend the legs, keep the trunk motionless while raising the feet, until the soles are parallel with the ceiling. Extend the legs, keep them motionless and raise to the sitting position without help from the hands. Stand upright, the feet close together, keep the legs motionless, bend the back, and touch the toes with the fingers of both hands. Stand as before, bend the back and try to touch the side of each foot alternately with the corresponding hand shut. The shutting shortens the reach. Stand upright, keep the legs firm, and twist the upper part of the body to the right and left alternately, trying to look as directly backward as possible.

TO preserve a youthful appearance let the diet be nourishing and digestible, with plenty of hot milk and milk cocoa. A greasy skin requires strict attention to diet, from which cream, rich butter, all pastry and rich foods must be excluded. Those subject to flushing of the face should not drink hot liquids, only warm ones. Pale people should eat underdone meat, lightly cooked eggs, oysters and plain milk puddings, and drink hot milk freely.

THERE is a beauty specialist who assures her patients that there is nothing to compare with the pillow nap, as she calls it, for producing beauty. The sleeping-out-of-doors fad in "down-to-zero" days and other "dares" to colds, which call forth remonstrances from old-fashioned persons, will be thrown into the shade, the specialist says, by this new beauty sleep. She places three little rose-leaf pillows, which she calls ear pillows, under a patient's head. Heaped on the couch "in such a way as to rest the nerves" are other pillows filled with various compounds. There are three large square pillows filled with pine needles loosely packed and several of clover-top and lavender.

REDNESS of nose after eating usually, but not always, points to indigestion. When it does one may know the fact by one or more of the signs following: Gaseous risings in the throat; burning in the throat; weight across the region of the stomach; pain in the stomach; pain in the lungs. But indigestion may be absent and yet something taken into the stomach may cause the redness. Alcohol will do this. Vinegar, pickles, mustard, spices, etc., are often offenders in this way. Hot foods and drinks may give rise to it. In some cases cold foods and drinks work the mischief. The fact seems to be that in these cases the nerves of a sensitive stomach are easily irritated by any extremes of temperature, or by any other strong stimulant, and that this affects the blood circulation in remote parts.

TO keep the hair bright and glossy and encourage a strong and rapid growth, few better methods exist than that of ventilation. The treatment should be practiced for five minutes each day, night and morning. The tresses should be separated one by one and shaken gently and slowly, so that the air may penetrate between the strands. If a maid's help is obtainable, a still better result can be secured, the attendant fanning the air gently onto the hair with the right hand, while supporting one lock at a time with the other. This must be persisted in until the hair feels light and the scalp cool and refreshed. Besides proving excellent for the hair, the treatment is wonderfully stimulating after severe brain work and has been much recommended in nervous complaints, of which headache and insomnia form a part.

DOINGS IN FASHIONDOM

BY MRS. KINGSLEY.

NOT a few of the very smartest shops on this side of the water have given the big sleeves a conspicuous place in their newest models. Those who have been privileged to see these new frocks with their bouffant adornment have first gasped with dismay, then promptly succumbed to the dictates of fashion and purchased a gown of this kind.

Whether or not the average woman will wear the big sleeve remains to be seen. But the truth is that the average woman did deck herself in this balloon fashion twenty years ago, and what she did once she is apt to do again.

Gray is one of the leading colors of the spring and summer. There is no use cavilling at gray because it is not thought becoming; there are many shades of it and careful choosing will avoid later regret.

Taffeta and several other weaves of silk seem to have taken hold of this gray dye in a satisfying manner, and some of the new frocks of silver gray taffeta with quaint little Brittany aprons done in mauve silk and caught with rosebuds, are delightful.

In evening gowns there are quite sumptuous gray brocades with dashes of silver or gun metal to give them character; these are trimmed with exceptionally well tarnished silver lace, and that new kind of gun metal lace which was brought about through the adoption of gray as a fashionable color.

For street frocks there are gray gabardines and serges, also jersey cloth, plain, or with borders of colored stripes. There are a vast number of gray separate blouses also in the shops, and of gray tulle and satin combinations there is no end. If one thinks it is not becoming it is quite easy to touch it up with splashes of color that will redeem it.

Stone brown and black and a soft elephant gray and black have a distinguished charm of their own for frocks, and in both cases the black may be distributed in the form of a narrow braid skirt, binding, the hip pockets slung from a loose belt, and a binding of the bodice to which tulle sleeves are pinned. Little tassels look well instead of buttons on the bodice. It is only natural that fashion for gray brings in a vast variety of the metallic composition known as gun metal. Large Puritan buckles of it are used on belt, huge bullet-shaped buttons of it are used to fasten coats and blouses.

In addition to the fashion of gray there has come about the introduction of Puritan collars on both blouses and frocks. It is so foolish and so misguided as to try to force your children into fields absolutely opposed to their natural inclinations.

The fashion for the cape is already so pronounced that one is beginning to see all manner of adaptations of it in lesser forms. Collars have advanced from three inches to ten and touch the shoulder line or hang below it. Sometimes they are made of the material of the gown and sometimes they are of organdie.

The newest frocks, though simple, have quaint touches about them that give them subtlety. One seen recently, made in primrose yellow taffeta had a delicious effect that immediately lifted it out of the commonplace. Round the hem of the skirt and short, basque round the bodice the taffeta was looped up to look like the ruffled window blinds that the most expensive and exclusive dressmakers have for their windows. Inside each puckered looping was a water lily of palest pink. Otherwise the frock was very plain, just swathed round the waist with a wide belt of silver tissue.

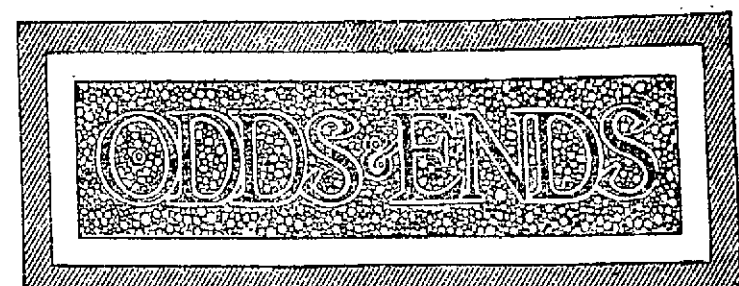

Some of the latest models have been copied from Greuze pictures. Their colorings are of the most delicate pastel shades, and they are lightly trimmed with lace draperies and frills. A novel feature of the evening dresses is that they are now lined with either chiffon or the thinnest of silk. The accordion pleated flounce just inside the skirt at the hem is the harbinger of the linings that will in all probability be with us by the autumn. They certainly make the dress hang well and give that adorable fro-frou that is dear to the feminine heart.

Talking of linings, detachable linings of silk, satin, or thin alpaca are noticed in many of the new wrap coats and dust cloaks. These are kept in place by snap fasteners and are easily taken out or put in. This is an excellent idea, and one capable of a good deal of exploitation in these days of adapting garments to more than one use.

It is quite pleasant to find in the midst of eccentricities the well known lines of the sports hat, simple in its composition and owing all its charm to its skillful modelling and the material of which it is made.

In pale soft tan and a very becoming turquoise blue, sports hats and coats to match are being sold. These colors seem to be the favorites of the moment, and the modish material is camel's hair. The hats have the knitted aspect of the coats and their fluffy surface, and the hosiery that is sold to match them, completes the trio of prettiness and leaves the choice of a dress a subsidiary affair.

To tone with a blue set gray homespun would be delightful, and to go with a tan one a scouring cloth skirt in the natural cream shade would be an obvious and satisfactory choice, though tobacco brown would be just as good, with shoe leather of the same tint.

FOLDING the arms is worse than ungraceful. It is unhealthy. By doing so you pull your shoulders forward, flatten your chest and impair deep breathing. The chest becomes so flattened down that it requires constant effort to keep it in the proper position.

AT one of the recent exhibitions of needlework in one of the embroidery schools more gowns and waists were shown than of center pieces and the usual fancy work. One of the old features introduced by the teacher were bunches of grapes done in what looked like Irish crochet, but which were actually executed with the regular embroidery needle in consecutive button-hole stitches over a padding. These designs were used, not only on gowns and waists, but on table linen.

IF you are in the pine woods this summer try a pine bath. It was invented by the famous German priest Father Kneipp, who devised many wonderful water cures. To prepare this bath gather a pound of fresh pine needles and pine cones. They must be full of resin to be most efficacious. Break them into bits and boil them for thirty minutes in enough water to keep them well covered. Strain the water from them and add it to a hot bath.

FOR home treatment of corns remove all the hard skin that you can, then soften it in warm water and rub with cold cream, vaseline or any softening salve you prefer. Let this be done at night. The next night begin by softening the corn in warm water, rubbing with a pumice stone, finishing with cold cream. If you will persevere with warm water, pumice and salve every night you will be at peace. Even dry rubbing with pumice is good, with the salve both night and morning. When the feet are weary and tender through long standing or waking during the day there is nothing which will give more relief than a warm footbath in which has been dissolved a handful or two of seasalt. Bathe the feet and legs with this for about ten minutes and then rub them well with a good rough towel. The effect is delightfully refreshing, and if you do this just before going to bed insomnia for that night, at any rate, is not likely to trouble you.

YOU know how uneven the edge of a dolly appears after it has been laundered and cut from the linen on which it is worked. One woman whose dolly have a beautiful, smooth edge always embroiders the pattern and then outlines the buttonhole stitch upon the machine. She uses 100 thread and makes several rows of stitches. The pattern is then cut from the material, lightly whipped with fine thread and the usual button-hole stitch is made. The machine stitches serve as a padding and eliminate uneven notches.

A COMBINATION sachet and corset holder is made of white linen, on which the monogram can be embroidered. The bag is made large, with the lower half fashioned into a little pocket in which crepe paper envelopes of sachet can be kept. One always needs a corset holder and the best material for one is white linen. Of course, the finishing touches can be supplied in any dainty pattern.

FREQUENTLY girls of 16 or 17 find difficulty in sleeping. This is so wholly unnatural that the cause should at once be discovered and cured. If the doctor tells you there is no functional disorder try the effect of fresh air, exercise, regular habits and simple diet. If possible, take a brisk walk just before going to bed. This must not be so long as to tire. Follow it by a warm bath in which a little seasalt has been dissolved. A gentle massage after the bath is excellent. Sip a glass of hot milk just before getting into bed. Sleep in a dark room with the windows open. Draft can be prevented by means of screens.

LEMONS are very useful in health and sickness. Hot lemonade is one of the best remedies for the incipient cold. It is also excellent in cases of biliousness. For malaria the "Roman cure" is prepared by cutting the rind and pulp of a lemon into a pint of water, then boiling until there is only half a pint. One teaspoonful is taken before each meal. This has cured obstinate cases when quinine failed. Lemon sirup, made by baking a lemon twenty minutes and then squeezing the juice upon half a cupful of sugar, is excellent for hoarseness and to break up a cold. Tie a piece of lemon on a corn at night for five nights, leaving it on all night. Soak the foot in warm water and the corn can be easily removed. When the root of the corn is taken out cover the toe with collodion or some other preparation to protect the skin, which will be sensitive. Unless the tender skin is protected it will soon form another corn. A piece of cotton saturated with vaseline and put over the toe will doubtless protect it just as well.

"SPRING POME" EDDY-TORIUL

In a recent issue of the Bugle we mentshioned cashuallu & incidentally, as you mite say, that Miss Sally Hoskins, one of our most estimable yung ladies & also praps the most talented & only poet writer in Bingville or this end of the county for that matter, was working on a pome entitled "Spring" & in that same connectshion we made so bold as to express the hope that when Sally completed the pome she would give it to us for publication in the Bugle & thus add to her already wide fame as a genyuse.

Well, it is with turrible pride that we a nounce that Miss Sallys pome on "Spring" is at last completed & that she has authorized us to print it which we do as per below so that all the world may read it in the Bugle.

Sally says she would of finished it sooner except that sometimes she was to bizzzy with housework & other times when she did have time she diddnt have no inspirashion. Sally says that she cant write poetry unless her Muze is working, whatever a-Muze is. We askt Wes Woodruff our expert hunter & trapper—who is well versd on animulogy if he knowd what a Muze was and Wes said yes, he ketchd one in a trap onct & it was a good eal like a Moose only mutch smaller.

It must be a gift to be able to write pomes like Miss Sally does & if you dont read the one below on "Spring" you'll miss somethink good. It aint not only bootiful in spots, but also sad & pathethick here & there going from grave to gay & full of luv, sentiment & cetry too numerus to menthion. Probly the more ignourunter amongst our subscribers will haft to read Sallys pome two or three times afore they'll be able to git the full signifcants of same. Be that as it may here is the pome:

O BEWTFEFL SPRING
BY SALLY HOSKINS, POETIST

O bewtfefwl Spring, I am glad you have came!
I hate winter so I cant think up enny name
Which is mean enuff to call it & Ime glad it is oer—
In fackt I wouldn't care if we didnt never have winter enny more.

I like to hear the bizzzy bees a buzzin round the flours—
I like to walk thru Lovers Lane in the Springtime twilite hours.
There is somethink in my heart whitck tells me Ime in love—
The mune is shining bright & the stars is twinkling above.

The birds is singing sweetly jest like as if they'd bust their throats
The farmer calkulates its time to plant his corn & oats;
The lambskins frolic on the green as pert as ennything
& why is all this thusly—simply becuz its Spring.

To me Spring is the most bewtfefwlest time of the yr—
Ennybuddy who don't like spring must be queer.
Winter is too cold, Summers too hot, Ottums too sad,
But spring is jest right & being its here Ime glad.
